Heritage Park West basin at issue

Park board to weigh suing village, MSD

by LYNN ASINOF

The Wheeling Park Board unanimously has called for an investigation into the possibility of suing the Village of Wheeling and the Metropolitan Sanitary District over problems connected with the Heritage Park West retention basin.

Park Board Pres. Robert Ross suggested the study, and asked that a report be prepared on legal alternatives open to the park district. The report is expected to be completed by Park Atty. Roger Bjorvik next month.

"I think the board is getting so tired of the doubletalk," Ross said of park district efforts to get the village and MSD to fund promised improvements to the basin. "It's either put up or shut up. I'm tired of waiting five years for something to happen."

THE PARK district originally donated 20 acres of land for the retention basin, which was to be used for boating and other types of recreation. The basin, however, has never been suitable for recreation because of its size and depth.

Park board members have been unhappy with the basin ever since it was installed in 1969. They have repeatedly met with both village and MSD officials, seeking improvements to the 20-acre lake, which they describe as a mudhole and an eyesore.

In addition, both the village and the MSD admit that the basin is not functioning properly for flood control. Improvements proposed by the village would include some structural changes to increase flood-control capacities as well as beautifying the area and making it suitable for recreation.

Park officials often have discussed the possibility of "a friendly law suit," but this is the first time the attorney actually was directed to investigate the matter.

ROSS' PROPOSAL followed a meeting with Trustee William Hein and Village Mgr. George Passolt. The meeting, which originally was designed to bring the park board and the village board together, was called to get a written timetable on the proposed improvements.

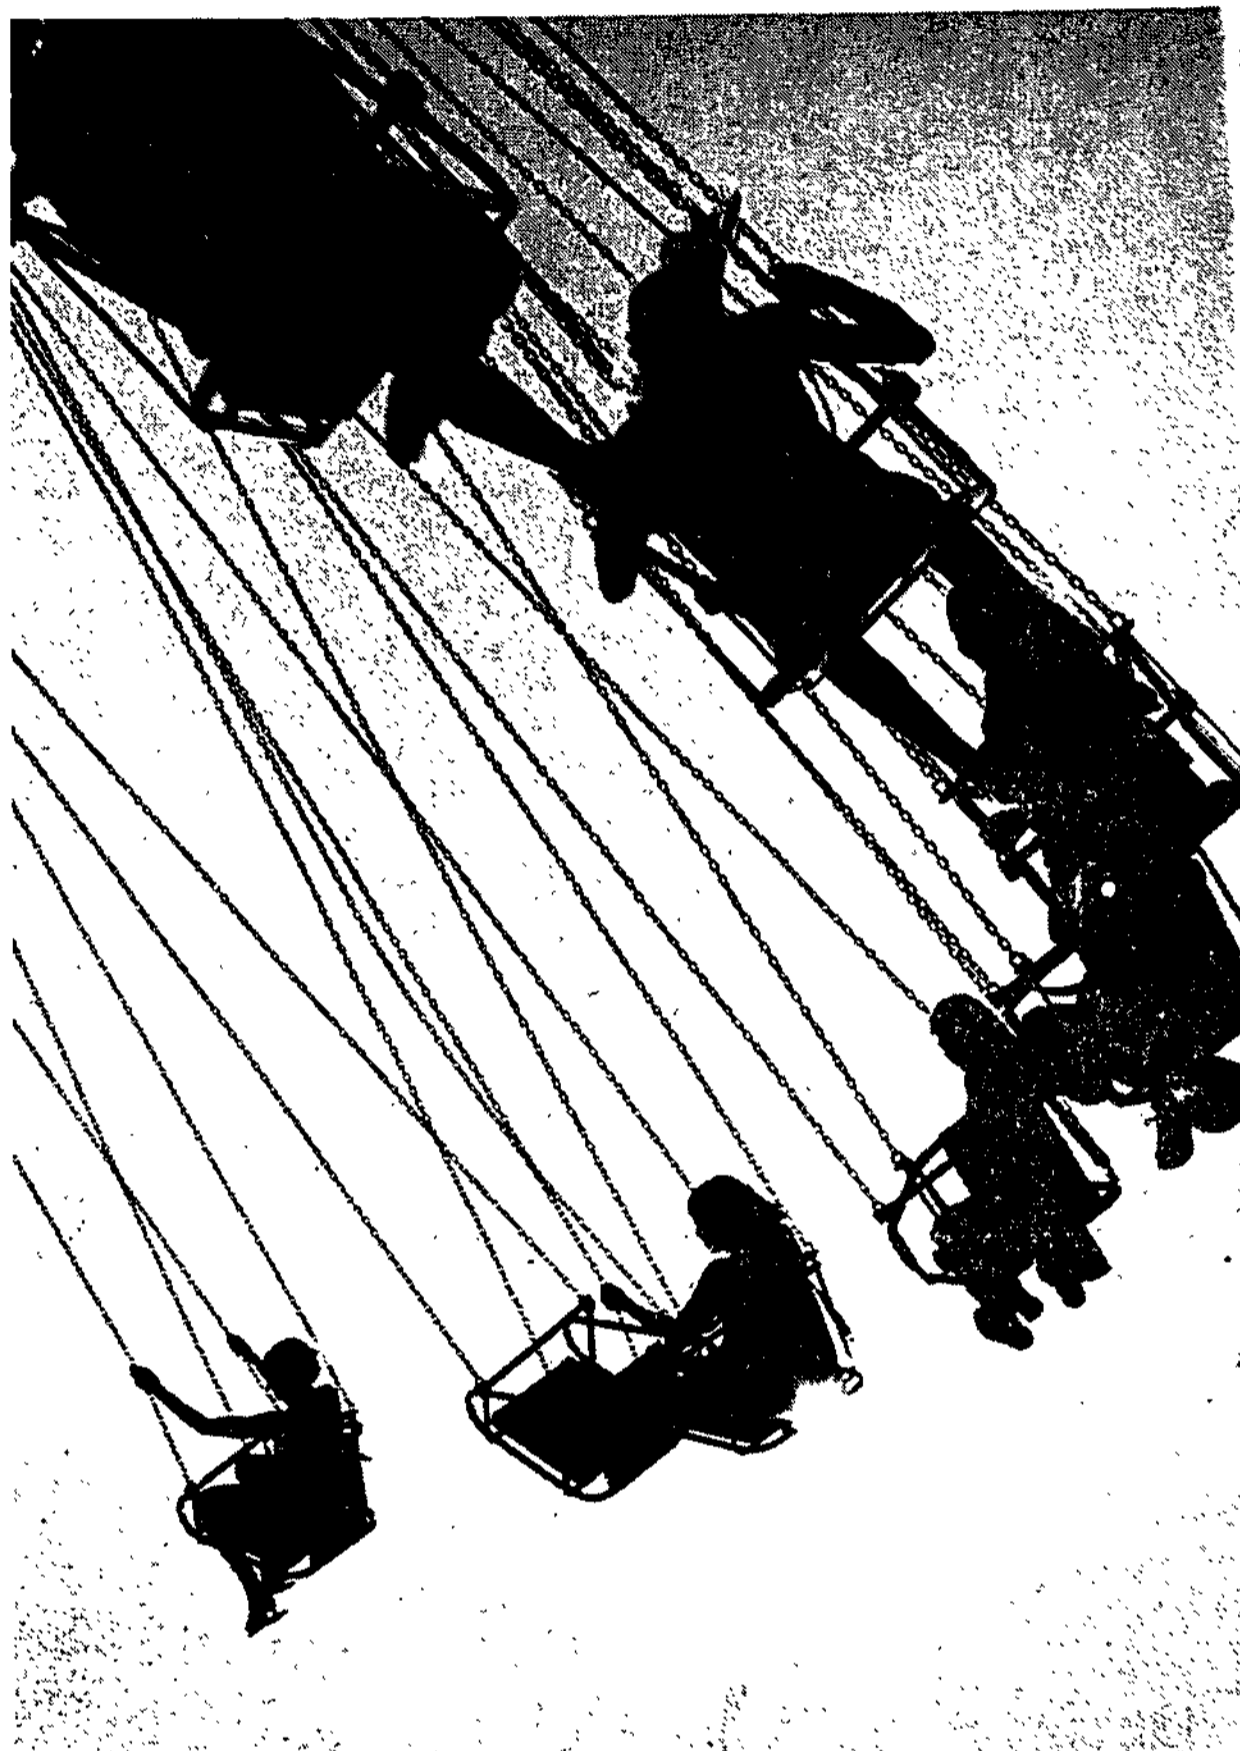

The park district has been asking for such a timetable for several months, and the village repeatedly has responded by saying that they are waiting for the sanitary district.

Proposed improvements to the Heritage Park West basin are estimated to cost about $450,000, with about $100,000 coming from the sanitary district. The work would include the dredging of the basin.

Passolt Thursday compared the idea of a friendly law suit to "a platonic love affair." He later said he was aware of the park board's action, but declined to comment on the matter.

The manager told the park board that village consulting engineers are preparing technical data requested by the sanitary district for a review of the proposed improvements. He said this data is to be finished by mid-August with discussions with the sanitary district to take place by September.

Comm. Gene Sackett expressed his dissatisfaction with the meeting, noting that the full village board did not attend. "This is something they are going to face, come election time," he said. "I think we are getting shafted."

Prospect Hts. committee will fight annexation OK

A group of Prospect Heights homeowners, known as the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee, is considering ways to appeal last week's Circuit Court validation of an annexation of 40 acres of Prospect Heights to Wheeling.

"Unquestionably, we are not going to accept this verdict," said committee member Lloyd Demel, referring to last Tuesday's court ruling by Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg.

Berg ruled that Wheeling's 1971 annexation of the property, owned by Arnold Liebling, was proper and that the objectors had filed their court suit too late in any case. Last week's ruling by Berg, reversed a November, 1971, ruling by then Circuit Court Judge Edward J. Egan that the "point annexation" (Liebling's property touches Wheeling only at its northeast corner) was improper.

"We're completely shocked, disappointed and irate with the decision rendered Tuesday," Demel told The Herald. "We are in complete disbelief about the totally unexpected decision."

Demel indicated strongly that the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee will appeal the decision and an announcement on the form that appeal will take will be made later this week.

Liebling had obtained zoning from Wheeling which enables him to build apartments on the 40-acre site. Construction was delayed for more than three years because of the lawsuit, however.

Liebling was unavailable for the second straight day and it is unknown whether he plans to build all apartments on the site or half apartments and half single-family residences as he had proposed in a compromise offer. The compromise was rejected several weeks ago by the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee.

Final review set for $3.7 million appropriations

The Wheeling Village Board tonight will conduct its final review of its 1974-75 appropriations ordinance, which is set at $3,690,019.

Although budget hearings were originally scheduled, they were canceled so that wage and salary negotiations could be completed. Village Mgr. George Passolt said he now expects any review of the budget to be informal, with trustees raising their questions before approving the appropriations ordinance.

The board also is scheduled to award the contract for the expansion of the municipal parking lot. The extra parking is needed for a traffic court which is scheduled to move to Wheeling shortly.

An ordinance creating a Bicentennial commission for the local celebration of the nation's 200th birthday also will be reviewed by the board.

The trustees will consider the expansion of both the plan commission and the environmental commission, so that more residents can become active in the village.

Final vote is expected on an ordinance reducing the vehicle sticker fee for senior citizens from $10 to $5. The ordinance would affect sticker rates in 1975.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the village hall, 253 W. Dundee Rd.

The School Dist. 21 Board of Education has agreed 5 to 0 to give Supt. Kenneth Gill the go-ahead to hire former board colleague Mary Joan Reid for a full-time paid position with the district.

The board met in a short executive session following a special meeting last Friday night. Before the session several board members said they had their doubts about the move because, although it is legal, many residents felt there was a "gray area" of unanswered questions about Mrs. Reid's qualifications.

Gill said he showed the board members the applications of all those who applied for the job and said that the board agreed Mrs. Reid was best suited for the full-time position.

THE NINE-YEAR school board veteran, who resigned two weeks ago, did not appear at Friday's special meeting. She now will be hired at a salary of $9,000 per year to coordinate the district's volunteer program and public relations work.

Board Pres. Jack Lane told The Herald earlier Friday that he is planning to recommend that the board pursue a policy that eliminates such situations in the future. Lane said the policy would not allow any active school board member to seek a job in the district until his or her term expired, or they resigned before even applying. It is not known when the board will act on such a policy.

The board now has until Aug. 24 to appoint someone to take Mrs. Reid's place. Anyone interested in sitting on the Dist. 21 board should submit a letter to Lane no later than Thursday. Letters should be sent to the Administration Building, 999 W. Dundee Rd. Wheeling.

IN OTHER ACTION Friday night the board voted 3 to 2 to retain its own attorneys rather than specialists in the Dist. 21 controversy with Tempton, Inc. The company was responsible for installing a security system throughout the district's 17 schools. School officials say, however, Tempton failed to comply with its contract, since the system is not functioning properly.

Board members Kenneth Rodeck and Jeremiah Crise said they wanted attorneys who specialize in such cases to handle the matter. Their counterparts Lillian Stiller, Ed Smith and Lane, however, disagreed and voted to retain the district's attorneys.

Gill said the district will try to work out an agreement with Insurance Co. of America, bonding company for Tempton, in an effort to settle the matter. Gill said no further action will take place until officials have received an answer from INA.

Jeffery Avenue bridge replacement off until '75?

The replacement of the Jeffery Avenue bridge may be delayed until next year as a result of problems in getting a second exit from the Meadowbrook West subdivision.

Two other flood-control programs, however, are either ready to begin or are experiencing only minor delays, according to Village Mgr. George Passolt. The manager reported on the flood-control programs Thursday at the request of the Wheeling Park Board, which has been seeking a timetable on the projects.

Passolt told the park board that bids on the proposed roadway out of Meadowbrook West were exorbitant. "The price, quite frankly, is way out of sight," he said. "At $94,000 I don't think we can put in a road."

THE ROADWAY is needed to give residents in Meadowbrook West a way in and out of their subdivision while the bridge is under construction. The bridge is currently the only link between the subdivision and other streets.

Passolt said the village has two alternatives. He said the village can wait until next year when contractors will be bidding on more projects at less cost. He said the concrete drivers strike has discouraged bidding and has inflated prices.

A second alternative is construction of a temporary roadway through Heritage Park to provide Meadowbrook residents with access to their homes. The proposed roadway was originally to connect Manchester Drive south to Carpenter Avenue.

Park board members said the village already has an easement agreement for a temporary roadway through Heritage Park. They said that the park, however, would have to designate the proper location of the road. In addition, Comm. Lorraine Lark asked that a permanent pedestrian walkway be installed across the Wheeling Drainage Ditch.

THE BRIDGE replacement is a flood-control program designed to increase the flow of water in the creek. The current bridge has a center support which acts as a dam by collecting debris under high water conditions. By replacing the bridge, the village will eliminate the center support and widen sections of the creek.

A second flood-control project, however, will get under way in the next few weeks, according to Passolt. He told the park board that work on the Husky Park retention basin will begin shortly. That project includes the installation of pumps to keep the basin bottom dry and usable for recreation in fair weather.

The village also plans to landscape the area and excavate the basin sides to make it more attractive.

A third flood-control project is being delayed until the proper dirt becomes available, Passolt told the park board. The manager said the village plans to build up the sides of the creek to prevent water from spilling over the banks into the Heritage Park East retention basins.

CURRENTLY, the creek overflows its banks and fills the basins before flood conditions are reached. The basins are then unable to accept water from east of Wolf Road, which is the area originally to be protected by the basins.

Park board members have repeatedly complained about the condition of the Heritage Park East basins, saying that the area cannot be moved because it is too wet. "Pretty soon we'll be growing lilies," said Comm. Lorraine Lark.

Noting that progress on the flood-control programs has been slow, Mrs. Lark called for the formation of a special committee to push for completion of these projects. She said the committee could stay in close touch with the village, and thus be able to inform the park board of their status.

Special NEC board meeting Wednesday

Dwyer School charges to be heard

by WANDALYN RICE

The Northwest Educational Cooperative governing board will meet behind closed doors Wednesday to hear charges made by six former and present employees on the operation of Dwyer School, a school for emotionally disturbed children.

Although the controversy has been brewing for several weeks, and has brought in the attentions of the county superintendent of schools, the NEC governing board is facing charges that the head of Dwyer School leads a disturbed child on a leash like a dog — although that charge has been vehemently denied.

The board will meet at 7:30 p.m. at the Kirk Center in Palatine. The six persons who are expected to appear are the ones who originally took their charges to Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick.

EDITH FREUND, president of the governing board, said the agreement to have the meeting came during a 2 1/2-hour meeting between NEC officials, representatives of Martwick's office and from State School Supt. Michael Bakalis of office.

"After we hear the charges, we'll have to make some investigation and take action," Mrs. Freund said. "I think both Martwick and Mr. Hennessy (Leo Hennessy, associate deputy superintendent in Martwick's office) are trying to help us arrive at the truth of the matter."

The charges made by the teachers claim that students were unnecessarily physically punished using a large hand-made paddle, that Dwyer clinical director John Whipple and several other teachers at the school are unqualified to hold their jobs and that Whipple allowed the staff to behave in an "unprofessional" manner.

OFFICIALS FROM both NEC and Martwick's office agree that the investigation is now zeroing in on the question of Whipple's qualifications and those of three other teachers at the school. Whipple is a registered school psychologist with a secondary teaching certificate, but does not have an administrative certificate required of school administrators in Illinois.

NEC officials have said they do not believe Whipple needs the administrative certificate because he is supervised by John Wightman, director of all NEC special education programs.

Martwick's office also said its investigation is not going into detail on the charges regarding the paddling. However, one official said that Martwick's office believes that "after the exposure that won't go on any more."

AN ADDITIONAL charge that has been made by some of the teachers is that Whipple led a severely disturbed child around on a leash and encouraged him to bark like a dog in the hallways of the school.

"I saw him doing it in front of staff members," Leah Rawson, a former teacher who left the program in 1973 because she was pregnant, told The Herald. Mrs. Rawson is not one of the six teachers who made the original charges.

Whipple has denied the story, calling it a "complete fabrication."

AMONG THE teachers who are expected to appear before the NEC governing board Wednesday are Lindy Curtiss, a teacher who was not retained in June after completing her first year at Dwyer, and Keith Parrent, who taught at Dwyer from 1971 to 1973 and left when he was not given tenure.

Miss Curtiss said last week that she wants her job at Dwyer back, but only if Whipple is removed as the program's director. She said, "Kids were helped in the program in spite of John Whipple."

Whipple said he believed the charges were coming from "disgruntled" employees "who I had to hold accountable for the results they were getting."

WHIPPLE ALSO has admitted that a paddle is available for use on children in the program, but that it only is used with parental consent and when the staff agrees it will be therapeutic for the child.

The Dwyer School program began in 1971. Children in the program are emotionally disturbed and unable to function in a regular school. Next year there will be 80 children in the primary and intermediate grades, housed in the Dwyer School building in Arlington Heights. Fifty children will be in the junior high program, which will be housed at Hoffman Estates High School.

School districts which send children to the program are Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15, Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21, Prospect Heights Dist. 23, Arlington Heights Dist. 25, Mount Prospect Dist. 57, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59.

Owner seeks more uses for track

"Our race tracks are large facilities and we can't afford to hold on to them if we're only going to use them 80 or 90 days out of the year." So spoke Joseph Joyce, a senior vice president of Madison Square Garden Corp. and the focus of a controversy when Madison Square Garden sought to hold a rock concert at its suburban Homewood race track that could have attracted 100,000 rock fans. Although Joyce was speaking about the Homewood track, his words have weight for Arlington Park which also is owned by Madison Square Garden.

Mary Joan opts for salary

A special meeting of the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Board of Education has authorized the school superintendent to hire a former member of the school board as the district's public relations specialist. The board agreed to have Mrs. Mary Joan Reid of Buffalo Grove hired at a salary of $9,000 a year to handle public relations and the district's volunteer program. Mrs. Reid resigned from her post on the school board just before she applied for the salaried position. She was on the board nine years.

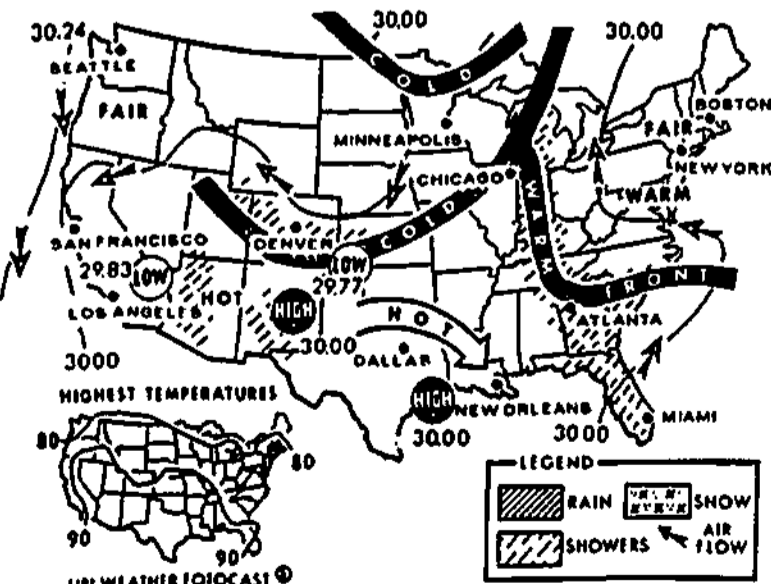

Buffalo Grove 'tar baby'?

The Buffalo Grove police chief has called a case involving the suspension of a policeman on charge of insubordination as a "tar baby" because whoever touches it will get tarred. In a memo from Police Chief Harry Walsh to Buffalo Grove Village Mgr. Daniel Larson, Walsh said the expected attorney fees, of up to $50 an hour, will probably be absorbed by the savings the village will accrue by not having to pay the salary of the suspended patrolman.

Rotting fish flushed away

A short, but fishy story unfolded last week in Des Plaines when several thousand dead carp were stranded and left to rot by receding river water. It all happened at the Methodist Campground when a storm the previous week flooded the Des Plaines river allowing the scavenger fish to enter the area. When the river retreated, the carp were left to die and Des Plaines firemen had to arrive with hoses to flush the fish back into the Des Plaines.

Turks sink Greek ships

From United Press International

Turkish warplanes sank three Greek navy supply ships trying to land at the Cypriot port of Paphos, Turkish military sources said Sunday, and a British armored convoy rescued thousands of American and British civilians caught on Cyprus by the Turkish invasion.

The sea battle flared, after Greek and Turkish regular forces clashed on the Mediterranean island for the first time since Saturday's invasion. One Turkish vessel was reported damaged.

In Washington, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger personally telephoned the prime ministers of Greece and Turkey and urged them to abide by a United Nations Security Council resolution for a cease-fire and negotiations.

A State Department spokesman said fresh instructions had been issued to Undersecretary of State Joseph J. Sisco, who has been shuttling between Athens and Ankara to urge a cease-fire.

Kissinger returned to Washington Saturday night from San Clemente, where he announced the United States was temporarily suspending military aid to Greece and Turkey, both members of NATO, because of the crisis. Kissinger held a crisis meeting of key U.S. government officials Sunday morning.

United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim issued a second appeal Sunday asking the fighting forces in Cyprus to spare the civilian population as diplomatic sources at the U.N. said Greece was planning to request another urgent Security Council meeting.

In Moscow, the Soviet Union signaled its implicit approval Sunday of Turkey's invasion of Cyprus by accusing the Greek government, allegedly supported by some North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies, of instigating the crisis by engineering the overthrow of President Makarios last Monday.

Four thousand foreign refugees left Nicosia Sunday in a 1,000-car convoy five miles long that wound out of the battle-torn Cypriot capital escorted by British armored cars. Other thousands made their own way from Nicosia and other Cypriot cities to the relative safety of the two British bases on the island. Hours later 1,400 refugees arrived in planes landing every half hour at two Royal Air Force bases north of London.

Ships of the U.S. 6th Fleet were ordered to stand by to evacuate an estimated 340 Americans on the island if necessary.

While Greece held off from committing its own warplanes, the Turkish air force ruled the skies over Nicosia. Radio Nicosia, in the hands of Greek Cypriot forces, said 13 Turkish planes had been shot down during fighting.

In Ankara, Turkish sources said Turkish air force planes Sunday sank three of six Greek navy vessels loaded with munitions and guarded by Greek warships tried to make a landing at Paphos.

Turkish warships appeared on the scene and engaged the Greek warships, the sources said, and one Turkish navy ship was damaged. Turkish warplanes then swooped back to rejoin the battle and the Greek warships fled, the sources said.

Earlier Turkey said its troops beat back an attack by Greek mainland forces stationed in Cyprus and captured the island's northern port of Kyrenia.

Greece so far as was known had sent no fresh ground forces to the island since the Turkish invasion. The Greek command in Athens said Sunday that Greek Cypriot forces had repulsed repeated Turkish attempts beginning at dawn to land reinforcements on Cyprus.

BRITISH ROYAL MARINE commandos prepare for a flight to Cyprus to reinforce the British garrison on the war-torn island. Some 1,000 reinforcements were sent to Cyprus during an all-night operation. Britain has some 19,000 servicemen and 17,000 dependents on the island and two sovereign bases.

GOP lawyer Jenner demoted

Two members of the House Judiciary Committee said Sunday that Albert Jenner, who has advocated impeachment of President Nixon, has been replaced as the committee's minority counsel. Reps. Service children being abused?

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., charged Sunday the Pentagon is paying to have dependent children of military men treated under squalid conditions in psychiatric institutions where they are tortured, injected with urine and placed in solitary confinement. Hearings on the allegations will begin Tuesday. Pentagon officials said comment on the matter would be "inappropriate." Hearings, said Jackson, will focus on two institutions — the Green Valley School in Orange City, Fla., and the University Center in Ann Arbor, Mich.

SST emission standards

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Sunday announced proposed air emission standards for supersonic aircraft which would take effect in 1981. The new standards would curb carbon monoxide, hydrocarbon and nitrogen oxide emissions; smoke would be virtually eliminated, says the EPA. The new rules will apply to foreign-made SSTs, since the U.S. has scrapped its own SST development plans.

Strip mine bill faces test

Environmentalists hope that a federal strip mining bill before the House will survive a rash of proposed weakening amendments this coming week. Reconsideration of the bill is to begin today. The ecologists won a major victory last week when the House defeated, 255-136, a substitute bill backed by the coal industry.

Senate office burglary foiled

A well-dressed burglar attempted to break into the offices of the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee but was surprised by a secretary working late on Capitol Hill, senate sources said. The subcommittee is probing charges a multimillion dollar heroin investigation was shelved when fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco's name surfaced. The panel begins hearings today into charges that two federal drug agents did an electronics sweep of Vesco's home and office.

Gurney may quit

U.S. Sen. Ed Gurney, R-Fla., saying he is "sick of politics" will decide early this week whether to abandon his re-election campaign in the face of federal bribery and conspiracy indictments leveled against him. Republican leaders have been urging Gurney to withdraw. He has pleaded innocent to 11 criminal charges.

Cambodian highway battle rages

Cambodian insurgent forces and government troops waged a bitter day-long battle Sunday for control of a vital pass on Cambodia's main highway to the sea, according to field reports. The highway, American-built Hwy. 4, links the capital with the deepwater port of Kompong Som.

Moving? Don't count on buying a house — mortgage money is short by United Press International

Mortgage money for homebuyers is scarce, and where it is available it is high priced.

Interest rates have climbed to above 9 per cent in Miami and San Francisco. Mortgages are available in Hartford, Conn., if the borrower can come up with a 50 per cent down payment. Hardly anybody is making loans in Atlanta.

While some realtors hold out hope interest rates will eventually drop, those surveyed by UPI in cities across the country also believe the purchase price of homes will climb at rates up to 16 per cent a year by 1975.

They advise buy now, even with high interest rates, if you can come up with the down payment. The cost of the home will be cheaper in the long run, realtors say, when you consider the steep increase in housing prices.

"There is no mortgage money available in the Atlanta area at the present time unless you're a veteran," said John Tarleton, an agent for Kuniansky Real Estate Co.

Tarleton estimated the price of a house or lot in Atlanta has doubled in the last five years. But Al Lewis, senior vice president of Fulton Federal Savings, one of Atlanta's largest, estimated the price of the city's real estate has increased 75 per cent in five years.

In San Francisco, a spokesman for the realty firm of Coldwell, Banker and Co. said the housing market is stable and home sales were up 1 per cent in the second quarter of this year.

But, the firm said, the price of San Francisco houses has gone up 30 per cent in three years and the price of a loan is higher: down payment requirements have increased from 20 to 25 per cent, interest rates have shot up to 9 3/4 per cent, payoff periods have dropped from 30 to 25 years and most institutions are charging 1 1/2 to 2 points for loans. Points are a one-time charge, payable at closing to the lender, based on a percentage of the principal of the loan.

Natural gas shortage next

Federal Energy Administrator John Sawhill said Sunday there will probably be sufficient petroleum supplies next winter, but not enough natural gas.

Sawhill predicted there will be continued curtailment of natural gas in industry and the energy source will remain in relatively short supply. Sawhill added that the "deregulation" of gas wells will have to be considered, even though this will probably mean higher costs to the consumer.

The energy chief also said he is concerned that if the Clean Air Act which expires next July is renewed, much of the nation's massive coal supplies will be banned from use because one third of our coal will not meet federal standards if burned.

Sawhill said he did not expect any relief in the price of gasoline for automobiles.

Poverty program killed by Conservatives, Arnett says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The ousted director of the fast disintegrating Office of Economic Opportunity said Sunday his firing indicates heavy conservative pressure on President Nixon to wipe out OEO's few remaining anti-poverty programs.

"They packed me up and booted me out," Alvin J. Arnett told UPI in the wake of an order from presidential adviser Dean Burch earlier in the week to submit his resignation.

The ouster was announced Tuesday to be effective July 31, but two days later a crisp letter from Burch ordered Arnett to vacate the office by the end of the day.

The official White House announcement of Arnett's resignation conceded that he lobbied to keep alive the major Community Action Program, which Nixon said in his 1973 budget should be eliminated along with OEO as an agency.

"The only program the President has said he will keep alive is the Economic Development Program," Arnett said, referring to a project which helps poverty pockets in the nation to lure new industry and build a tax base.

In Hartford, three of the largest banks are charging record interest rates for home mortgages and requiring 50 per cent down payments. The Society for Savings established new mortgage rules last week with the 50 per cent down payment figure and a 9.75 annual interest rate.

A survey by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board showed Dade Miami County, Florida, had an average interest rate on new homes of 8.67 per cent with 2.8 discount points for an effective interest yield of 9.13 per cent for an average term of 27.5 years. Down payments of about 20 per cent were required.

New home sales in the county dropped 21 per cent in the first five months of this year, according to one mortgage broker. An increased state interest ceiling of 9 1/2 per cent was just passed by the Illinois legislature, and Robert G. Walters of Baird & Warner Inc. realtors of Chicago said sales volume for the first half of 1974 was about the same as last year. The family which buys a $40,000 home now, even at 9 1/2 per cent interest, will be money ahead, Walters said. If the family had waited two years and bought the same house with a lower interest rate its price would be so much higher that they would spend more money.

He said a 30 per cent down payment would probably be required now, but if the family waited two years the price of the house would have climbed to $53,592.

His advice, of course, assumes the family can handle the down payment plus closing costs.

On a national average, the National Association of Home Builders estimated the cost of building a three bedroom 1 1/2 bath home is up 15 per cent from last year, not including the price of land and profit to builder and real estate firms.

The nationwide average price for loans is about 9 to 9 1/4 per cent interest according to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington, and the national average for down payments on new and existing mortgages is about 27 per cent.

Young spurns interview with Mikva-tied organization

by BOB LAHEY
U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, has declined an invitation to be interviewed by representatives of the Independent Voters of Illinois because of a link between the organization and Young's Democratic election opponent, Abner J. Mikva.

Mikva is a national vice chairman of the Americans for Democratic Action, with which the IVI is affiliated.

In a letter to IVI chairman Lee J. Epstein, Young requested that the organization refrain from making an endorsement in his race with Mikva, "since, obviously, the IVI would be strongly biased in favor of Abner J. Mikva, a vice chairperson of the ADA."

Young also suggested that the IVI should change its name to the "Independent Liberal Voters of Illinois" to more accurately reflect its nature to the voters.

"I know that your organization is active and that your organization participates in election campaigns," Young wrote Epstein. "I think this is good. I also see no objection to your espousing liberal principles. I have been told that some of my views are liberal."

But Young said he believed the word "independent" in the IVI's name to be misleading because of its affiliation with the ADA, "which is strongly and highly identified as a group formed to promote liberal policies," a purpose stated in its charter.

Seek June 30 adjournment

State Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, plans to introduce legislation which would encourage a June 30 adjournment of the Illinois General Assembly each year.

Samuel H. Young

Mrs. Macdonald is proposing that food and lodging expenses of $32 daily paid to legislators when in Springfield not be allowed after June 30.

Formerly, the state constitution required adjournment by June 30. That provision was eliminated in the 1970 Constitution however, and the legislative session extended until July 2 last year, and stretched out until July 12 this year.

Mrs. Macdonald termed the prolonged session this year to "inadequate organization," and said it was unnecessary to remain in session past June 30.

She noted that delegates to the 1970 Constitutional Convention were given a deadline for per diem expenses by the legislature and that "helped promote the adjournment of the convention."

'Great Charity Race'

Republicans in Elk Grove and Wheeling townships have named teams for their first annual "Great Charity Race," scheduled for this Sunday in Arlington Heights.

Two teams will race on undisclosed vehicles with proceeds from the $3 tickets for spectators going to Shelter, Inc., a nonprofit agency for temporary emergency care for neglected children in Elk Grove, Palatine, Schaumburg and Wheeling townships.

Representing Wheeling Township will be Wayne Anderson, candidate for Cook County treasurer; State Sen. John Nimrod, R-Skokie; Ron Larson, candidate for the County Board of Commissioners; Jerry Pals, candidate for the Board of Tax Appeals, and James Ryan, candidate for the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

Racing for Elk Grove Township will be township committeeman Carl Hansen, candidate for president of the county board; U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th; state Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect; State Rep. Donald M. Totten, R-Schaumburg; Mount Prospect Mayor Robert Telchert; Township Supervisor Richard Hall, and Jack Pahl, former mayor of Elk Grove Village.

The race, scheduled for 4 p.m., will be preceded at 3 p.m. by Big Wheel races for children ages 4 to 8. The races will be held on Dunton and Fremont streets, adjacent to the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

Holy Family names communications head

Ethel Miner has been appointed communications coordinator at Holy Family Hospital. Her responsibilities include handling of all operational problems in connection with the hospital switchboard, coordinating trouble reports, follow-through and arranging for communications in the new sections involved in the hospital expansion.

Since 1969, Mrs. Miner has been telecommunications manager, Arizona Highway Dept. She also has 15 years experience as service analyst, service representative, marketing representative and operator for Mountain Bell and Southern Bell.

Mr. and Mrs. Miner are the parents of two boys and live in Schaumburg.

Children give money from fair to charity

A group of Mount Prospect youngsters who organized a fun fair last week have decided to donate their earnings to the American Cancer Society.

The nine youngsters, aged 7-10, collected $4.50 from the sale of popcorn and lemonade in their neighborhood on Rob Road near Lincoln Street and Busse Road.

Children who took part in the venture were Lisa Anderson; Chris, Paula and G. J. Priester; Elisabeth Singer; Danny and Larry Tomco, and Paul and Lynn Weisenstein.

Democratic picnic Sunday

The Democratic Party of Palatine Township will hold its annual picnic at Deer Grove Forest Preserve beginning at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Donations of $1 per person or $3 per family are being asked, and the organization will provide ice cream, soft drinks and beer. Committeemqn Richard Mugaian said participants are encouraged to provide their own picnic lunches. The picnic will be at Groves 1 and 3.

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Damaged heart valves can leak

What causes a "leaky" valve of the heart? Just what is this and how does it affect an individual? Are the lungs affected? Is it a serious condition? How should it be treated?

There are four main valves inside the heart that regulate the flow of blood. All of these are made up of two or three flaplike structures. You can think of them as curtains. When the flaps close no blood can normally pass between them. When they open they let the blood flow through that part of the heart.

Sometimes the valve flaps are damaged or don't close completely. In this case blood will leak through the valve when the flaps are supposed to be closed. This is called a "leaky valve."

Damaged valves can be caused by many different things. In young people the most common cause is rheumatic heart disease. When a person has a heart attack, the control of the valve flaps can be affected so they don't fit together properly and cause a leaky valve even after the heart attack is over. If the heart enlarges as in heart failure, the valve flaps may not meet properly and cause a leak.

What to do about the problem? It really depends a lot on how bad the leak is. If it is a small one it won't affect the function of the heart too much and may be left alone. If it is a large one, depending on which valve is involved and the patient's condition, it may have to be replaced by heart surgery.

If the heart is not pumping effectively because of the leaky valve it can result in accumulating fluid in the lungs. This is one of the things that can happen with heart failure. This doesn't mean the heart stops but that the heart muscle is not strong enough to pump as much blood as it needs. Medicine often helps this problem. By strengthening the heart the fluid is pumped out of the lungs and conditions return to near normal.

I think I might have cancer of the rectum. When I move my bowels there is usually blood. This only happens once in a while. I am 45 and no one in my family has ever had cancer. Is there any other way I can tell if I have it before going for a checkup? Could this be something other than cancer? Would you please hurry with this answer. It's very important to me.

There is only one thing to do about bleeding from the rectum, get an examination. That is true for all ages. It is less likely that you have cancer of the rectum, but it can and does occur in young adults.

Even if you don't have cancer, it is still important to find out what is causing the bleeding. The most common cause is hemorrhoids. You can have those internally where you can't see them. However, cancer of the rectum can cause pressure on the veins in the rectum and cause hemorrhoids. So you shouldn't neglect having an examination just because you think it's hemorrhoids. Early diagnosis of cancer of the rectum often means it can be cured. Letting it go can be a disaster.

Higher taxes, costs mean more off-season uses for track

by KURT BAER

Higher taxes and a growing overhead mean additional off-season uses must be found for Arlington Park Race Track, according to a senior vice president of Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of the track.

"Our race tracks are large facilities and we can't afford to hold on to them if we're only going to use them 80 or 90 days out of the year," said Joseph Joyce, contacted by The Herald Friday in his New York office.

Joyce was at the center of a recent controversy in south suburban Homewood after he proposed a rock concert featuring Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young or Elvis Presley at Washington Park Race Track, also owned by Madison Square Garden.

PLANS FOR the concert, which Joyce guessed could have drawn 100,000 persons, were scratched after the musical groups could not be booked.

While there are no specific plans for a similar music fest at Arlington Park, it is likely something will be proposed in the future, Joyce says.

"It is a reasonable possibility that at some time down the road we'll use Arlington Park for a concert," he said. "We don't like to produce a lot of noise where we have horses stabled, though," he added.

It is Madison Square Garden's policy, according to Joyce, to notify municipalities of plans for special events at their facilities.

"We told the village board in Homewood that there was a possibility that we could get Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. They asked for an estimate of how many people might attend and I said at the outside 100,000, and then the rocket took off," he said.

HUNDREDS OF Homewood residents organized in opposition to the planned concert fearing the hordes of pot-smoking, free love-making teen-agers they associate with rock music. They packed the Homewood village hall last Tuesday to protest the concert only to be told by Joyce that the plan had been dropped.

"The tentative date we had with Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young would not come to fruition and then the Elvis thing fell apart."

"But this doesn't mean we wouldn't try to do something at some other time," Joyce said.

The concert planned for Washington Park was scheduled at a time when the race track is dormant — a condition that will prevail at Arlington Park after this year's racing ends Sept. 7.

In accord with Joyce's comment on the economic necessity of off-season uses for Arlington Park are the plans for a private housing at the track being drawn by the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development firm.

"We're still meeting with Madison Square Garden. I hope we can get back to the village's plat and subdivision committee before too long," Arthur Gingold, Richards Group president, said Friday.

ONE PRELIMINARY plan included several 20-story high-rise apartment buildings on the race track property north of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Gingold has declined to discuss details of the housing plan before it is presented to the plan commission's plat and subdivision committee.

"We're still working with it," he said.

Appropriately enough, the Richards Group of Illinois is a subsidiary of Madison Square Garden Corp.

Park district wrapup

Higher finance ordinance OK'd

The Wheeling Park District's 1974-75 appropriations ordinance, which includes substantial increases in both park staff and recreational programs, has been approved.

Park board members finalized the $333,485 appropriations ordinance during public hearings last week, although no residents appeared to question the park finances.

While the 1974-75 appropriations ordinance is only $5,071 higher than last year's figure of $328,414, the park district will have more funds for its programs because the district eliminated most of its deficit spending last year. As a result, the park will not have to cover last year's expenses in this year's budget.

In 1973-74, the park district spent approximately $4,000 more than was allocated in the budget. Park Supt. David Phillips said the overspending was caused by the fact that only 88 per cent of the park's 1972 tax levy was collected. He said in the past tax collection has averaged between 93 and 97 per cent.

The overspending, however, was substantially less than in past years, he said. Last year, the park district issued $150,000 in tax anticipation warrants and spent approximately $75,000 of that money.

Phillips said if the district had not had to cover the $75,000 in tax anticipation warrants, it would have ended the year with a $71,000 surplus.

Bathing caps required again

Park board members have reinstated the use of bathing caps for all persons with hair longer than four inches who swim in park district pools.

Comr. Hugh Wilson complained of hair collecting in the pool as a result of the park district relaxing its bathing cap rule earlier this year. The rule was dropped on a trial basis to see whether maintenance costs would be substantially increased.

Although Park Supt. David Phillips said the maintenance costs have not risen, the park board voted 3-2 to require the use of bathing caps starting Sept. 1.

Wilson also asked that the pool guards provide closer supervision of youngsters at the pools to prevent "rough-housing," which he said is getting excessive.

Opinion asked on Rob Roy plan

The park district is looking for community feedback on whether the board should pursue the joint purchase of the Rob Roy Golf Course with other community park districts.

Kenroy Inc. of Skokie has proposed building a high-rise apartment project on the golf course, which is in unincorporated Cook County. The project would leave only nine of the 18 holes on the course in tact.

Area park districts and the Cook County Forest Preserve are exploring ways of preserving the full 18-hole course.

Comr. Lorraine Lark proposed that the park board seek community feedback before committing the district to the joint purchase venture, which could result in considerable cost to the district.

Tile project up to committee

A suggestion to install acoustical tile at the indoor Neptune's Pool is now up to the buildings and grounds committee despite a negative reaction from the park board.

Park Supt. David Phillips suggested installing the acoustical tile after Wheeling High School proposed the project. Phillips said the district could use referendum funds previously earmarked for the remodeling of the Heritage Park recreation building. The park district would have to pay half the cost of the estimated $11,500 project, with School Dist. 214 picking up the remainder of the expense.

Park board members, however, said funds from the proposed remodeling of the Heritage Park building should go towards landscaping and improvement of the park sites.

"I think there are other places to put this money than in the pool," said Park Pres. Robert Ross.

Phillips asked for a speedy decision on the matter since work on the pool would have to be scheduled in August or early September.

Bike path program questioned

Park board members voted to send a letter to the Wheeling Police Department inquiring about the status of a bicycle path program in the village.

Comr. Gene Sackett proposed the letter, saying that Wheeling is at least 1½ years behind other villages in marking bicycle routes. He said the village has already waited two years for a bicycle safety program scheduled to start this fall.

Sackett said that while special bicycle path markings on the streets would be preferable to signs, the signs might cause drivers to slow down.

cheer up when he visited the pediatric wing of Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

'Better than medicine'

Jack Thum Thee Clown loves children, and the feeling happens to be mutual

by FRAN SLIMMER

Jack Thum's been clowning around the state for the past 15 years, and vows to do it the rest of his life.

He dons his colorful baggy suit, big red nose, curly wig and big flipper-like shoes seven days a week, to entertain at parties, promotions and picnics. He also makes volunteer visits to children in hospitals and orphanages twice a week, including one to the Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

"Once I got that costume on, time doesn't matter," Thum said. He may be hired for three hours, he said, but he'll stay around as long as he gets children to laugh.

"We all need a little laughter," he said. "There's so much grief in the world."

THUM LOVES children, and while he has none of his own, he has raised 16 foster children. "I haven't had a Christmas without a child with me," Thum said.

"A child is a child to me," he said, whether the child's healthy, sick or handicapped. "As long as he has a smile and feels wanted, he's the same to me. They're all God's children — and I'm the biggest one."

Thum remembers when he was a child who spent two years in a hospital, paralyzed with rheumatic fever. He recalls how he felt when someone came in to cheer him up. Now he visits children confined in hospitals and orphanages. "I, Jack Thum Thee Clown, will go to them and make them happy."

Thum said he was "gifted" with the talent to be a clown. He had been a salesman and was always joking around before he became Jack Thum Thee Clown.

"I don't think there's another clown in the business who goes by his real name," he said.

HE USES A big rubber thumb as a prop in his act. "I ask the kids what they would call me if I didn't have my thumb," he said. "They always say 'Fingers.'"

Thum likes to have children assist him in his act, which includes a few simple magic tricks.

Thum invited a little boy with an ear-to-ear grin help him make "magic popcorn" Thursday at Alexian Brothers. Thum sprinkled "magic corn" and "magic salt" in a "magic pan," and instructed his assistant to hit the pan with a magic wand.

"If you keep hitting like that you're going to make a chicken fly out," he warned his rather enthusiastic helper.

Thum visits hospitals with cartons full of surprises — get-well cards, bubble gum, tootsie pops and magazines, props for magic tricks and handcuffs to hang on to reporters with. Children sometimes react rather shyly to him, he said, but he likes to make them smile and forget their ills.

ONE HOSPITAL, St. James in Chicago Heights, said Thum is "better than medicine," when it comes to taking the pain away from a sick child. "They call me 'TLC' — tender loving care," he said. Other hospitals have claimed him as "their clown," he said.

Thum does radio and television spots, has performed at McCormick Place and recently gave the key to the City of Harvey to Gov. Daniel Walker. Soon he'll be visiting Dixon State Hospital, which he does several times a year. Also, Illinois Central Hospital wants to send him to an orphanage in Poland, he said.

"I'm looking for my own TV show," he said.

It takes Thum two hours to put on his clown face — white skin with a big red smile, bulbous red nose, blue-painted and glittered designs on his face and blue sideburns. "Can you guess how many hours a day I spend in this makeup?" he said. Sometimes it's most of the day. He always drives, in costume, to his performances.

"My costume's not frightening," he said. "I'm a happy clown with a happy face." He likes to make children smile, he said.

"It's the most beautiful thing in the world to give children something to be happy about," Thum said. "I wouldn't give this up for a million dollars — and believe me, I've had offers."

Park chances for Childerley grant 'good'

Plans for the Wheeling Park District's acquisition of two park sites have been granted a 16th priority listing by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission.

The park board, however, is hoping to change its priority by seeking revisions in its rating. The NIPC listing will be used by the Illinois Dept. of Conservation to distribute $3.5 million in matching grants for land acquisition.

Park Atty. Roger Bjorvik said the park district has a good chance of receiving a matching grant for the acquisition of the 10-acre Childerley Retreat House property, 506 McHenry Rd.

The Childerley site received 50 points out of a maximum of 60 on the NIPC rating. Park Supt. David Phillips said he is hoping to boost the site's chances by proposing additional points for the property's historical value. In addition, he said the site also might receive points because it is adjacent to a 1.1-acre site recently acquired by the district.

The park district's proposed acquisition of 10 acres on Schoenbeck Road across from Carl Sandburg School received only 40 points on the NIPC listing. The park district has initiated condemnation proceedings for the property, which is proposed as a neighborhood recreation area.

In an effort to bolster park district chances for funding, Phillips will travel to Springfield for the conservation department's review of funding priorities. The meeting is scheduled for Aug. 16, with a final decision on state grants to be announced by mid-September.

Linda Smith wins nurse's scholarship

Linda Smith, 217 Reece Ter., Wheeling, has been awarded a $800 nurse's scholarship by Skokie Unit No. 320 of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Miss Smith was graduated from Wheeling High School in June and is currently studying at the Evanston Hospital School of Nursing. She is the daughter of Marvin Smith, legionnaire in the Skokie post.

No gold in Ft. Knox?

Congressman Phillip Crane, R-12th, is going to Ft. Knox to make sure there is gold in the vault. We hope he finds the bullion in good shape and returns to Washington secure in the knowledge that there is, indeed, gold in the nation's treasury.

No gold in Ft. Knox? The rumor has persisted for years and now Crane is going to the Kentucky repository to find out, once and for all, there is gold in the gold vault!

Crane is a member of the House Banking and Currency Committee and has an undeniable right to inspect the nation's reserves. But at the same time we would hope the Congressman would find a more serious purpose for his visit.

The idea that there is no gold in Ft. Knox is one of those canards which emerge every so often from the nether worlds and swamplands of the political fringes. Just like the rumors that Franklin D. Roosevelt is still alive somewhere or that a cabal of foreign bankers are controlling our destiny, the "gold bullion report" is best discarded out of hand.

Suppose, for example, that Crane were to arrive at Ft. Knox and upon entering the vaults found them empty. Alone, his heels clacking the hollow chambers, the Congressman walks the empty rooms in a state of stunned disbelief.

Then, in the interests of the world economy, national priorities and a direct appeal from the President, Crane, alone with his knowledge, is persuaded he cannot reveal his awful secret.

You see, once you begin believing in conspiracies they accommodate every eventuality. If Crane emerges from Ft. Knox with a report that the gold inside is pure and secure, the rumors will not die. Conspiracies have heavier weight than any Congressman's word and outlive any rational appeal. For if we did not have conspiracies to blame, then the problems of the world would be ours alone to solve and could not be blamed on mysterious outside forces which cannot be controlled.

On Crane's behalf, we should say he does not doubt the integrity of Treasury Secretary William Simon that the gold exists; nor, in our experience with him, does the Congressman take stock in the conspiratorial theories that plague the ultra-conservative wing of American politics.

But if Crane's mission to Ft. Knox is to debunk the case of the missing bullion, he should be forearmed that it will do him no good. If he says there is gold in Kentucky, the conspiracy advocates will build a conspiracy to include him, and the rest of us will wonder why he is wasting his time chasing shadows.

U.S. Supreme Court: today and yesterday

by TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON — While the people of the United States wait for the decision in the case of their government vs. their president, the eight participating Supreme Court justices go about what Arthur Goldberg calls "the lonely business of judging."

Lonely indeed. Secluded in their marble chamber, some of them avoiding even news accounts of litigation in progress, the old men operate in Washington's one remaining isolation ward. They do not have the luxury of polls to gauge the republic's attitude. There are no leaks to relieve the pressures of their responsibilities. There is, as Goldberg says, communion "with the great spirits of the masters of the law who preceded," but otherwise: "Each man must decide the matter entirely by himself."

Goldberg should know. He is a graduate of the supreme legal monastery (1962-63), one of four living former justices. Now in private Washington practice, he remembers his first day on the big bench as "the time when my telephone stopped ringing." Nobody calls a Supreme Court justice. They are men apart. The public view of them is that they are wizards of Oz, to be respected but never approached lest the Great Decision-Making Process be interrupted.

The public view is, of course, excessive. But there is, according to Goldberg, much that is monkish about the men who can integrate schools, outlaw pornography and judge presidents.

"You do not shop for opinions," says Goldberg of members; the wives, sons and bowling partners of the justices are never consulted about matters before the court. "When I was there, I didn't talk to anybody outside the court. I didn't even tell my law clerk how I'd vote."

Instead, members consult each other in a variety of ways. One-to-one contact is naturally frequent, with exchanges of ideas, opinions and sometimes arguments. "They don't roar at one another," says a court official, "what they do is use words of great weight with which to thump each other over the skull." Albeit, the tale is told of one early justice who got so angry at a fellow that heavy words were not enough — so he knocked over the adversary's water glass.

Each Friday the members gather in conference to vote. But the debating does not necessarily stop there. If the ruling is unanimous, each member must still agree on a final draft of the written opinion — no easy thing, says Goldberg, who remembers once writing an opinion 10 times before the court would accept it. At times members have changed their votes after reading the opinion; at times a single phrase has broken the unanimous decision.

If the verdict is divided, or if separate opinions are wished (each justice wrote his own opinion in the Pentagon Papers case), the writers often try last-minute appeals for their side. The opinions circulate freely among the members, often with some soft-shoe politicking: "If I change this part, will you then join me?" Or: "Look, how can you write this? Only last month you wrote the opposite."

Despite the inside influencing, Goldberg says deadline changes of votes are as rare as bawdy jokes in the court. As for outside influencing, he says it doesn't exist, at least it didn't for him.

"I made a practice of avoiding newspaper editorials on a case before court. I felt that as a judge my concept of the Constitution should be wider than that of any newsman or editor."

But if the court is difficult to influence, the public is likewise. As we wait now for the Nixon judgment, it would be well to remember that Brown vs. Board of Education did not immediately integrate the schools, that dozens of pornography decisions have gone unheeded, and that, in fact, once when the court reversed the sentence of a convicted murderer he was executed anyway.

Thus the judgment on Richard Nixon, no matter the lonely wisdom involved, may as in past decisions raise more questions than answers.

...while Chief Justice Warren is recalled

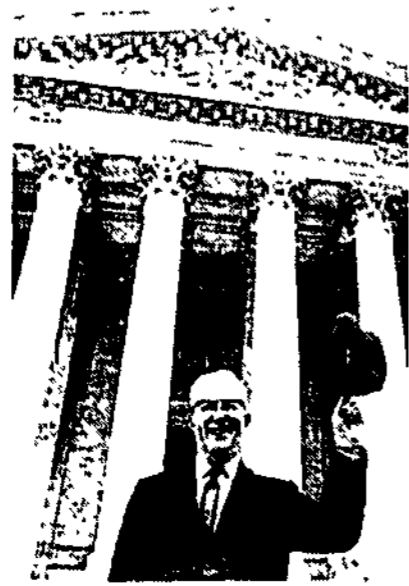

by TOM WELLMAN
Chief Editorial Writer

They buried the man with the decisive smile ten days ago in Nixon's Washington, but somehow his death transcended the politics of our nation's capital.

Earl Warren's death was out of tune with the way frenzied official Washington was behaving the week of July 7. On Monday, slightly more than 24 hours before his death, tourists crowded into and around the Supreme Court building. It was the day of oral arguments in Nixon vs. Jaworski.

Even, on the day of his death, the revised transcripts of the Watergate tapes were bigger news than his passing. Nixon, the man so often at odds with the record of the Warren Court, and his troubles overshadowed the death of Warren.

Yet, on Thursday, July 11, a ragged line of tourists filed past Warren's flag-draped coffin in the rotunda of the U.S. Supreme Court Building, past the busts of other chief justices, past the starched-stiff policemen and honor guards and past the guest book. Outside, in Nixon's Washington, the sun was shining and the tourist bus from "Second Baptist Church, St. Pete," waited.

Warren's death was not honored so much by the funeral — funerals are traditional in Washington — but by the events and anniversaries which have taken place in the past few months.

Earlier this year, the twentieth anniversary of the Warren Court's most famous desegregation decision—Brown vs. Board of Education — was recalled. Although the impact of the decision is blurred today, it marked the beginning of what came to be known as the civil rights revolution.

And, as Warren rested in state, a statue honoring Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, a prominent black educator, was unveiled. It is the first statue in our nation's capital to honor a black woman—and it follows from the civil rights revolution.

Earl Warren, of course, shares the responsibility for the civil rights revolution in the kind of way that the Washington Post shares responsibility for blowing the Watergate cover-up. Each was an instrument in starting a chain-reaction of events.

It would be wrong, indeed, to mark Warren as the man whose court should be remembered solely as the desegregation court, for the effects of his decisions in 1953 through 1969 have far-reaching impact on each of us today.

The one-man, one-vote doctrine has resulted in redistricting of local legislative districts and given us fairer representation in our state legislature. A variety of criminal rulings have given us greater protection if we're arrested by the police.

Our children aren't forced to worship in public schools, our wages cannot be garnished without a hearing, and birth control information can be freely disseminated. All of these changes result from the decisions reached under Warren's tenure.

Beyond these decisions — the merit of which will be debated as long as there are liberals and conservatives — is a feeling of fairness and of stature about Earl Warren. It is a feeling totally missing in the contrast today in official Washington.

Let impeachment or resignation continue. One is inevitable. But let Earl Warren's words survive:

"Where there is injustice, we should correct it; where there is poverty, we should eliminate it; where there is corruption, we should stamp it out; where there is violence, we should punish it; where there is neglect, we should provide care; where there is war, we should restore peace; and wherever corrections are achieved we should add them permanently to our storehouse of treasure."

Fence post letters to the editor

An open letter to the residents of Buffalo Grove:

I have lived in Buffalo Grove for 10 years and have seen the development of shopping centers, schools, and homes as our village grew.

With more homes, came more people, and with them came many children. The Buffalo Grove Park District was developed and fine programs were started to keep our kids busy and physically fit.

One Buffalo Grove Park district program is baton. Girls can take lessons and join classes from beginners and intermediate, up to joining one of two baton corps our village is fortunate to have — the junior and juvenile Buffalo Grove Barons.

In the Junior Baron corp, girls who twirl along with boys and girls in a music section work very hard all year to produce a very fine military corp with disciplined rules and regulations. They compete during the summer months at hosting high schools and have accomplished a lot. Recently, the Junior Barons received 2nd and the Juvenile Barons took the Illinois state championship in their divisions.

The parents of these youngsters are proud of their talents, glad of their interest, and relieved that they know what their children are doing and where.

I am sorry to say that this fine group of kids may have difficulty holding future competitions in Buffalo Grove because of "complaints" from some 20 or so residents in the Buffalo Grove High School area who called the police about a "rock fest" and the noise they were making. All they heard was the practicing of the Barons and other corps before competing in the state contest. Had these people listened to the "noise," as they called it, they would have heard the sounds resulting from hours and hours of practice, sweat and talent as they played their corps' music, much of it patriotically inspired. How could you call that a rock fest?

As one Buffalo Grove resident to about 20 others — I am ashamed of you.

Vandalism irks him

Both schools and churches are frequent targets of child or youth vandalism in the suburbs, and St. Nicholas Church, Elk Grove, has been no exception. What has disturbed us mostly, however, has been the lack of cooperation from the parents.

The Elk Grove police have been very cooperative, and on some occasions their careful investigations have caught those guilty. But it is then we run into difficulty. On one notable occasion, three boys were apprehended (one already under court supervision). One of the families paid their share of the damage to our building. The other two families promised me and the police youth officer they would pay their share. When they appeared in court, they told the judge they had paid — a blatant lie. We never did hear from them again, and the boys were let off.

In other words, the children heard their parents lie to a priest, a police officer, and a judge!

This week we had a "Do Not Enter" sign of heavy metal stolen within hours after it had been put up at a closed exit to our parking lot. I think we surmise correctly that this now hangs in someone's bedroom in one of the neighboring homes. Where do the parents think their child got it? It is not of the plastic kind sold at "head shops" but a rather expensive sign of the sort used in regular highway control. Some mother and father are perhaps even chuckling over the "cleverness" of this addition to the house.

If by chance those parents read this, I wish they might think for a moment of the long term effect of such adult disregard for property rights. If they would quietly return it to the church no questions would be asked.

Suburban planning odyssey for 2001: 'will we grow too much and too soon?'

THE HERALD

"Sooner or later, someone has to look at a land-use plan of the whole United States and say it is folly to dig up cornfields that are producing..."

—Virginia Hayter

"The growth rate of the suburbs is not entirely dependent on the birth rate. You can stop the flow of people from Chicago by stopping one thing — fear..."

—Robert O. Atcher

by STEVE FORSYTH

One of the hottest issues among planners and municipal officials today is how much the Chicago suburbs can or will grow in the next 20 to 25 years.

Although the arguments have not reached the boiling point, the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has fanned the fire by distributing its own population forecast through the year 2000.

At one of eight area "feedback" meetings last week in Elk Grove Village, NIPC staff members listened to expected arguments from municipal officials charging that the estimates are too low.

THE OFFICIALS are most disturbed at the breakdown of population growth by township, saying that procedure would disturb individual municipal plans.

NIPC expected arguments from the outset, and appropriately called the forecast project "CASSANDRA." The acronym has literal meaning as Comprehensive Allocator of Systems, Services and Regional Activities, but is more appropriate for its mythological connotation.

Cassandra in Greek mythology was a woman who was given the power to foresee the future, but also was given the curse that no one would believe her.

Last Thursday's meeting at the Elk Grove Village Holiday Inn pitted such diverse areas as Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates and the Barrington communities against each other. Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher praised his own community's long-term planning, and criticized efforts to infringe on it as "socialism."

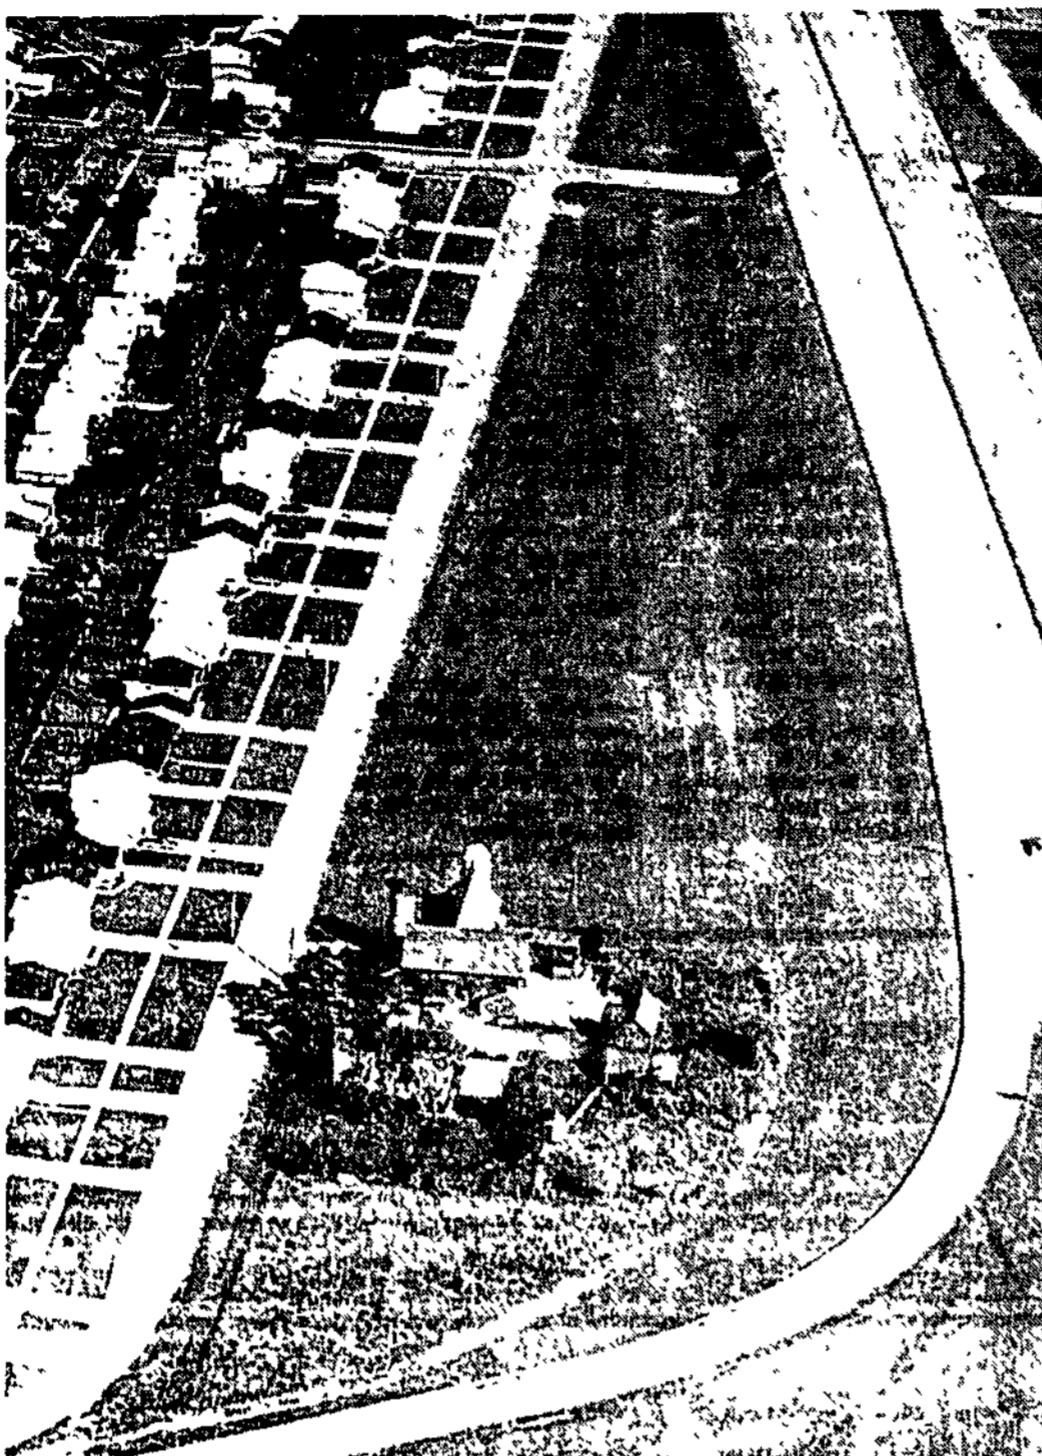

"Sooner or later, someone has to look at a land-use plan of the whole United States and say it is folly to dig up cornfields that are producing," said Hoffman Estates Village Pres. Virginia Hayter.

ATCHER COUNTERED his close neighbor by calling such land-use restrictions "socialism." "I don't believe in socialism or in national land-use planning telling everyone what he can do with his land," he said.

Atcher said attempts to spread sales tax revenue from large sources such as Woodfield Shopping Center into other communities is also socialism. He said communities that want to keep out commercial and business zoning now want to dip into the pockets of communities that cope with those problems daily.

Schaumburg township is a highly contested object of population forecasting because Atcher and other community leaders in the township feel their villages are going to grow extensively, into the hundreds of thousands of persons.

THE GROWTH IS not going to come from a personal ambition to be larger, Atcher said, but from the realistic idea that more houses will be needed for the children who already are in this world, even though birth rates are dropping.

"The growth of the suburbs is not entirely dependent on the birth rate," Atcher said, referring to migrating Chicago residents. "You can stop the outflow of people from the City of Chicago by stopping one thing — fear."

People are coming to the suburbs because of fear of poor education for their children, fear of loss in property values or fear of physical harm, he said. "They have a right to have a place, and a right to choose."

Massive commercial projects have been proposed for Schaumburg, and Atcher said they are needed because the village wants to be more than a bedroom for Chicago. He said original plans accounted for thousands of jobs and a population of 300,000, and "I still feel they'll be there (at least in the township)." NIPC predicts only 140,000 by the year 2000.

NIPC STAFF members have said that the reduced population growth figures recently proposed indicate a shortage of people if all communities continue to plan for massive growth. NIPC figures show that 12 of the 120 townships in the six-county metropolitan area would absorb all the growth that is expected to come if present plans are realized.

Donald Klein, executive director of the Barrington Area Council of Governments, said the plans are not a "snake-oil cure," and that community cooperation will have to be arranged if suburban growth is to be orderly and intelligently done. The practice of zoning to bring in money, which results in boundary squabbles and developers playing one town against the other, is at fault in many of the problem areas the suburbs now have, several municipal leaders said.

CHILDREN YOUR GREATEST ASSET?

Are you worried that your child can't read, write or do simple math problems? Does the lack of morality concern you?

If the answer is yes and you would like an alternative to public schools, consider sending your child to the CHRISTIAN LIBERTY ACADEMY. The Academy stresses Reading, Writing and Arithmetic in kindergarten and earlier grades. Latin, Greek, Economics, History and Christian Philosophy are among the subjects added in 4th through 12th grade. There will be an Education Seminar given at the school on July 25 at 8 p.m. All concerned parents are welcome. SHE'S A PERFECT CINDERELLA. In a few weeks, Yvonne Schaffer, 10, will be transformed into a princess by her fairy godmother in the Schaumburg Park District drama classes' rendition of the updated fairy tale. Ton youngsters from the area are learning what theater is all about this summer, in just one of the many programs offered.

Kids in summer

Cinderella goes mod

by KAREN THOMPSON

SETTING: A party. Charles and his mother, Mrs. Figowitz, and Cindy's mother and two sisters are there. Decorations, bright lights and rock music fill the air. Everyone is dressed in their best duds. Cindy enters the party and is spotted by Charles. He asks her to dance . . .

Do you recall this popular play? It's an updated version of the fairy tale classic, Cinderella, being rewritten, practiced and put on by a group of beginning "stars" in the Schaumburg Park District summer program.

Nine girls and one boy set about the task of completely rewriting the play as it would happen today. Instead of Cinderella, the hardworking girl turned princess for a night is called Cindy. Instead of golden slippers, she wears sandals. Instead of Prince Charming, the rich and handsome man living in the big white house on the hill is Charles. And the couple go to a party not a ball and dance rock and roll, not the fox trot or the waltz.

With the help of their instructor, Kathy

McLean, the summer drama students finished the play and were ready for the big step — TRYOUTS.

But, before the fun, there were exercises to practice and terms to learn. Who knows what dialogue is? Improvisation? Pantomime?

CHARACTERIZATION. we were told, is the taking on of a new role. To make the lesson really stick, each of the eight to 12-year-olds took turns acting like a father — "Where's my dinner. Get it on the table right now." A mother — "Pick up your dresses and everything else in this messy room." And a girl crying, which Monica portrayed with no words at all. "I cry a lot anyway," she said with real tears in her eyes. "I'm very good at it since my dog died."

The tension mounted toward tryouts as youthful feet swung nervously under chairs, the chatter grew louder and sillier, and everyone tried to keep a secret of what character she had chosen for tryout. Of course, David, the only boy in class, already had the lead of Prince . . . oops, Charles.

Kathy made it clear that it takes "everybody working together to make a play go well," making sure that those not voted in for their part would not be too disappointed. "We still need chairmen for our committees on makeup, set designs and costumes," she said.

I was a one-man audience for what looked for a minute like no tryouts at all.

Not one of the aspiring young actresses wanted to read first. "I'm afraid to try out," they whispered between pairs of friends.

But once the ice was broken by a petite, curly headed blond trying out for the part of Cindy, the others followed eagerly — some reading for three or four parts.

There were just a few problems. "Read again. This time without the gum. We can't hear you between chomps."

THE CLASS DID the voting with a few words of advice from their instructor. "Don't vote because it's your friend reading, but because it's a person who will do the best job for our play," said Kathy, a recent graduate of Rosary College in River Forest.

The number of readers dwindled as the parts got smaller until, in the end, nobody wanted to be Mrs. Figowitz or the postman. There were some very disappointed faces. But, the play goes on. That's show business.

SETTING: Narrator comes on stage. The curtain is slightly apart and Charles and Cindy are standing in a dimly lit background holding hands and looking at each other.

NARRATOR: So Charles and Cindy were married and lived in the suburbs. THE END.

Suburban Living

Especially for the Family

IT TAKES MORE than actors to make a good play. Cheryl Gipson and Patty Kyloonen work on stage decorations for the upcoming production of Cinderella.

Consumer's battles not won yet

by MONICA WILCH PERLIN

Even if you can't afford an attorney to fight your consumer problems for you, there are lawyers working on your behalf.

Behind the scenes, without the kind of publicity that government agencies get, lawyers on the Consumer Protection Committee of the Chicago Council of Lawyers seek to secure consumers' rights.

Co-chairman of this committee is Thomas Eovaldi, who also teaches consumer law at Northwestern University Law School and practices with the Northwestern Legal Assistance Clinic.

Soft-spoken and unpretentious, Eovaldi can pleasantly demolish the credibility of a lot of consumer-related laws.

He similarly demolishes the glowing claims which some consumer agencies make as to how much they are helping consumers.

The hard truth Eovaldi lays on the table is that consumers may not have come as far as they think. There is still a mountain of consumer-related injustice flourishing in the vacuum left by laws that lack adequate remedies and agencies that fail to enforce the legal remedies they have.

FOR EXAMPLE. Eovaldi said, the consumer protection committee achieved passage of an amendment to a state law that allows a creditor to file a suit in court against a debtor and send the sheriff to seize the disputed property. The buyer is left without remedy in this situation.

The amendment codified a Supreme Court decision requiring that the buyer be notified that action was being taken against him. Eovaldi said. It also provided that any waiver of rights which the buyer might have signed — a common procedure in retail sales contracts — would be invalid.

Eovaldi and colleagues also tried to get the state to abolish "confession of judgment" clauses. That's the fine print in your apartment lease (also found in many other contracts) saying in effect that you confess guilt ahead of time in case you ever break the lease. It means, again, that legal action can be taken against you without notification and with you being liable for court costs and attorney's fees.

But the committee ran up against a stone wall in Springfield, where, Eovaldi said, a powerful creditor lobby defeated the proposal. But he found their opposition rather curious, for several reasons.

In the first place, he pointed out, "Illinois is one of only seven states still having confession of judgment. The other 43 have abolished it." In the second place, the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled the clause is invalid if the consumer can show that when he signed the contract containing the clause, he 1) did not know the clause was there, 2) did not understand it, or 3) did not sign voluntarily.

BUT STRANGEST OF ALL. Eovaldi said, is the fact that creditors could achieve the same ends by simply serving a summons on the delinquent tenant. So the clause is really unnecessary, in addition to being useless in view of the Supreme Court decision.

But changes in the laws don't do much good if the laws are not enforced and the remedies not exhausted. Eovaldi faults consumers themselves for not "availing themselves of the laws that are there," but he points also to lack of aggressiveness on the part of the consumer fraud office of the Illinois attorney general.

"They don't do enough," he says. "They issue announcements that they have recovered so many millions of dollars for Illinois consumers, but they don't follow up on these cases, so they don't know whether the orders were followed up and the money actually returned."

"There is a lot going on that could be reached by them, but is not. They are just not in the forefront," Eovaldi recalled that NU law students used to work in the consumer fraud office for school credits, but the program has been discontinued because "the students hardly ever were involved in any litigations."

THE CONSUMER fraud office, Eovaldi said, "has the authority to promulgate rules as to what constitutes consumer deception, but they have not exercised that power." He gave as an example debt collection abuse, which was the subject of hearings held by the attorney general's consumer fraud office last year, but for which there are still no rules.

The consumer fraud office, Eovaldi observed, "does not have goals or priorities to go after; they just respond to complaints. They seek very few injunctions, and in many cases," he added, "it's critical to act fast."

But Eovaldi declined to lay fault at anyone's door — either Consumer Fraud Chief Howard Kaufman or Atty. Gen. William Scott. He pointed out that the consumer fraud office "has a staffing problem and inadequate budget." He said there are only four persons to handle litigation in Chicago, and "they are swamped."

A reason why grocery store slicks thrive

When great magazines such as the old Saturday Evening Post, Life, Look and the old Saturday Review were dying, many people tried to figure out why.

I have long been curious about the fact that the women's magazines, particularly those depending on supermarkets for circulation, have been doing extremely well. Their circulations are mind-boggling, their advertising revenues are out of sight, and yet these magazines rarely feature material of thought-provoking depth or controversy.

Now, before I get jumped on for criticizing the grocery-store slicks, I want to quickly point out that I, too, buy them. But I've always wondered why. At least I have discovered the reason why these magazines continue to thrive so handily.

They have discovered the secret of life — small "L."

AS EVERYONE KNOWS, all life has cycles or rhythms. It is editors' accurate tuning into the rhythm of middle class American female life that sells these magazines by the millions, month after month.

The particularly salable secret and rhythm plumbied by these magazine is done by such articles as "10 Ways to Slim Your Hips and Thighs," "New recipes for Easy-Bake Yeast Breads," "Remarkable New Inches-Off-Effortlessly Waist Exercises," "Desserts You and Your Guests Can't Resist," "Firm Up and Trim Down Upper Arms and Back Muscles in 2 Weeks," and "Cooking with Sour Cream — 10 Rich, Elegant and Easy Entrees."

Usually there is one get-thin (exercise) article and one get-fat (recipe) article in each issue. Generally the reader follows the one she needs the most one month, then buys the magazine the following month for the article serving the opposite need. And so on. To round out the perfect plan, a new sure-weight loss diet is offered every three or four issues, and in another three or four complete seasonal party menus are presented.

AS ANYONE WHO reads these magazines regularly knows, the real clincher on the reader is that the articles are generally well-researched and tested, and they work! You can slim your hips and thighs, and the desserts are so good you can't resist.

Theoretically, a well-disciplined person could pick up one issue a month of one of these magazines, and in a year's time, have accumulated enough information to have a permanently (figuratively speaking) sound body and a highly reputable kitchen. But we are a short-termed people, and in June we must desperately undo what we ate in May so we can picnic in July.

Long before the paper industry began to run out of trees, a few magazines found there is indeed money in recycling.

THE STRING, the sensation that started on the beaches of Ipanema, is now available in pattern form from McCall's. All it takes is a yard.

Now you can sew your own String

For the past few weeks, The String has been making news from Time magazine to the beaches of Chicago. On sale for just a week in the windy city, sales are running high.

But why spend all that money for less than a bikini. Now you can make your own. Getting a new design into a catalog is usually a long process, but McCall's rushed this new eyecatcher through in 60 hours to have it ready before the summer's over.

It will be in the October catalog that is available Aug. 1. There's still plenty of time left to whip up a scanty swimsuit before the weather cools down.

THE STRING takes less than a yard of fabric and less than two hours to make. It's pattern number 4430, costs $1.25, and sizes 6-16 are all in one package.

Only three pattern pieces, fabric on the double, and enough string to hold it together are needed. The bottom is elasticized and the string ties high on the hip. The mini bra top is adjustable as it slides on the string for a custom fit.

One yard of fabric, on the double, is all that's needed, even for a large size. Macrame cord is suggested for the string itself.

SPEAKING OF sews and patterns, a new name passed across my desk recently — Patterns Pacifica of Honolulu, Hawaii.

The company announced the arrival of the new Tahiti Pareu. Just cut, hem, rap or tie this sarong — it's as easy as that. The pattern includes tying techniques, all using one cut of exotic fabric hemmed on the edges.

It's a beach cover-up, a day dress, a hipster skirt and an evening wrapper.

Pattern number 5020 costs $1 and comes in small (6-8), medium (10-12), and large (14-16). Using 45-inch wide fabric, you would need 1 1/2 yards for a small size, two yards for a medium and 2 1/2 yards for a large.

Fashion

by Karen

Suggested fabrics of a Hawaiian or Polynesian style are acrylics, polyesters, lightweight knits and cotton blends. Patterns Pacifica offers a full line of patterns. If you have been unable to find them in the area, write: Patterns Pacifica, P.O. Box 5367, Honolulu, Hawaii, 96814.

IF YOU CAN FIND any summer items left in the stores right now, a smart investment is the straw tote bag — the bigger the better.

Women's Wear Daily calls the new craze, "grasping at straws, something hangers-on can't get along without this summer." What a good excuse to buy big for a change, and think how much you can carry.

We'll be ready for anything with the straw tote, big enough to carry a small bikini, sunglasses, tanning cream, or an extra pair of sandals along with all the other paraphernalia normally lugged in a purse.

As suitable for the city as for the country, the carry-alls have put down those canvas bags of summers past. There are some straws that look like Little Red Riding Hood's basket and others that are smaller and carried by handles, but the runaway favorite is the over-sized, bigger-at-the-top pouch that swings from the shoulder on long double handles.

Love flourishes in the good old summertime

The engagement of Valerie Anne Kilment to Darrell B. Rutherford of Lake In The Hills, Algonquin, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Don Kilment, 104 W. Jeffrey Lane, Des Plaines.

Their wedding is planned for next June 28.

A recent graduate of Forest View High School, Valerie works at the Des Plaines Oasis. Her fiance, son of Mrs. Dorothy Scholtus of Lake In The Hills and Donald N. Rutherford of Elk Grove, is employed at the Playschool, Inc., Distribution Center in Des Plaines.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Mayer of 804 Seegwon, Mount Prospect, announce their daughter Cynthia's engagement to Gregory Mazzone, son of the Eugene Mazzones of Chicago.

An early October wedding is planned.

Since graduating from Forest View High School, the bride-to-be earned a degree from Western Illinois University and is a teacher in School Dist. 54, Schaumburg. Her fiance graduated from Washburn Trade School as a sheet metalist and works for Climatemp, Chicago.

A Palatine couple, Cheryl Lynn Koehler and John Kenneth Lancaster Jr. are engaged but have not yet set their wedding date.

Their news comes from Cheryl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton John Koehler, 330 S. Hale St. John's parents are the John K. Lancasters, 630 N. Eagle Ln.

A graduate of Fremd High School and Harper College, Cheryl works for Bunker Ramo Esis in Rolling Meadows. John attends Loyola University and works for Morse Shoes in Schaumburg. He is a Palatine High graduate.

A Rolling Meadows girl, Penny Peterson, is engaged to Jack Moon of Arlington Heights but they have not yet set their wedding date, according to Penny's parents, the Richard A. Petersons, 3808 Jay Lane South.

Jack, son of the David Moons, 945 Ridge Ave., graduated from Arlington High School in 1972 and is a mechanic at Bob's Standard Station, Arlington Heights. Penny graduated last year from Rolling Meadows High and is a receptionist at the O'Hare Industrial Clinic, Elk Grove.

SILVER VASE DENOTING excellence remains for the year with Arlington Heights Area Alumnae of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority. The award was made at the recent national convention. Proud of their chapter's achievement are Mrs. Edward Stautzenbach, past president, and Mrs. David Meeker, current president.

Area Kappa alums receive award for excellence

Arlington Heights Area Alumnae of Kappa Kappa Gamma were recently presented with the fraternity's McNaboe award of excellence for associations under 50 members.

The national honor embodied in a silver vase was given to the chapter president, Mrs. David A. Meeker of Arlington Heights, at the 50th Kappa general convention held June 20-23 in Columbus, Ohio, fraternity headquarters.

The trophy, which has been presented on a rotating basis throughout the United States and Canada to outstanding alumnae since 1940, is given on a two-year record of achievement.

OF PARTICULAR IMPORTANCE in judging was the philanthropic support by area Kappas through a donation toward a whirlpool for Northwest Community Hospital, as well as support of the fraternity scholarships in the field of rehabilitation.

Other categories recognized were the chapter's aid to Northwestern University collegians, membership, programs, ways and means, and hospitality.

Offer new breast cancer test

The George and Anna Portes Cancer Prevention Center at 33 W. Huron St. will soon become the first major facility in Chicago to offer female examinees a thermography test to help detect possible breast abnormalities. The test will be routinely offered to all female examinees as part of the Center's overall health screening program.

Dr. Angelo P. Creticos, medical director of the center, said thermography is painless, rapid and totally free of after effects. He explained the process. "All matter gives off infra-red energy or heat. This technique will measure the amount of heat emitted by a part of the body. In this case the breast, to detect abnormal growths.

phy have been able to increase their findings of early cancer of the breast by at least 50 per cent," Dr. Creticos asserted. "This is a highly significant statistic."

FIVE SPECIALLY heated "suites" or chambers are now being constructed to accommodate the new device. In approximately two months, the center will have the capacity to screen 80 females per day as part of its routine examination.

As for the procedure's future, Dr. Creticos said, "There is no question that this device will become a most important tool in other structures of the body besides the breasts."

Those wishing to contact the center may call 944-4371.

Romance progressed by the holidays

The romance of Juanita Bonnie May of Arlington Heights and Robin B. Bracher of Mount Prospect advanced with the succeeding holidays from the time they met at Prospect High School.

The couple had their first date on Valentine's Day, became engaged on Christmas Day and almost were married on July 4. Instead, they chose June 30 and by the time the Fourth arrived they were enjoying their honeymoon at Disney World in Florida.

Juanita is the daughter of the Karl R. Mays, 2005 E. Park St., and Robin the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Bracher, 713 N. Fairview.

THE COUPLE exchanged vows and rings by candlelight in St. John Church, Mount Prospect. It was an all-blue setting with the bride and groom in blue dotted swiss and carrying blue umbrellas filled with blue carnations.

Juanita carried blue roses with white carnations in her bouquet as she came down the aisle for the five o'clock ceremony. Her gown was of white organza with a lace border at the hem and with lace accents on the Empire bodice. A Camelot cap held her chapel-length mantilla veil which was also edged in lace.

Debbie Maniscalfo of Mount Prospect was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids included the bride's sister Debbie and Sue Robinson and Diane Gray, both of Mount Prospect.

ALSO COMING down the aisle was 6-year-old Tammy Simons, the bride's niece, who wore blue dotted swiss and carried a white straw basket filled with blue carnations. Ken Harvey, 12, another cousin, was ring bearer.

All the groom's attendants are from Mount Prospect. His brother Arthur was best man, with Gary Groth, Dave Hockstead and Rick Heidrich as groomsmen.

The Camelot Restaurant was the setting for a reception attended by 150 guests after the wedding.

Now back in the area, the newlyweds are living in Arlington Heights while working in the northwest suburbs.

Juanita graduated from John and Louis Beauty School after finishing Prospect High School and works at the First Lady Salon, Schaumburg. Her husband is with George W. Noff Moving Co., Arlington Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. James Zimmerman

James Zimmerman takes bride

James Frederick Zimmerman of Arlington Heights and his bride of June 15, Shirley Jean Thompson, are making their home in Kansasville, Wis., just a few miles from Union Grove where the bridegroom teaches auto and power mechanics.

They were married in Westwood Christian Church in Madison, where Shirley has been living and working, but her parents, the Milo Thompsons, live in Lone Rock, Wis.

James is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Zimmerman, 311 N. Haddon Ave. He graduated from Arlington High School and Stout State University, Menomonie, Wis., so has really been a Wisconsin resident for the past several years.

HIS SISTER, Jeanne Zimmerman of Mundelein, was maid of honor for the double ring afternoon ceremony. The bride's sister, Mrs. Linda Bauer of Gotham, Wis., was bridesmaid.

Serving the groom were Gary Cowles, Madison, as best man and Tony Mertes, Suffex, Wis., as groomsman. The wedding guests were seated by the groom's friends, Tom Jochimsen, Kansasville, and Howard Orloff, Madison.

A reception followed in the church fellowship hall for 100 guests and after a short honeymoon the newlyweds settled in their new home.

The bride worked in the University Book Store in Madison prior to her marriage.

Next on the agenda

PLUM GROVE GARDENERS

The Plum Grove Garden Club's annual splash party is today at 11:30 a.m. at Mrs. E. R. Rielly's home. Her co-hostesses are Mrs. Robert Austin and Mrs. John McKee.

The afternoon activities feature salads, swimming and flower selections.

LA LECHE LEAGUE

The newly organized Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates group of the La Leche League meets Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Jackie Whithan. The topic will be "Baby Arrives: The Family and Evans, Newbern, Tenn.

Amy Jean Awabdy weighed 8 pounds 11 1/2 ounces at birth July 14. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Hanna Awabdy, 220 Firestone Dr., Hoffman Estates. The couple also have a son, Nicky John, 2. Grandparents are Dr. Nicholas Siplock of Elgin and the Rev. and Mrs. Hanna Awabdy of Portland, Ore.

Thom Christian Berg is the newcomer in the Thom C. Berg family of 1708 Winthrop Ct., Schaumburg. Born July 12 at 6 pounds 13 ounces, he has a sister, Michelle, 2. The Henry Gefes of Palatine and the Trygve Bergs of Des Plaines are the baby's grandparents.

Herbicides treat poison from plants

Dear Dorothy: Do you know the treatment for poison ivy, poison oak and poison sumac? — Mary Lee Kling

By "treatment" I assume you mean getting rid of the stuff. The same four herbicides are used for all three — 2,4-D, amitrole, silvex or ammonium sulfate. Best time to use this kind of spray is when there is the least amount of air movement — early morning or late afternoon. You may have to spray more than once as these are persistent growers, with new plants springing up from the roots when you think they're gone.

There's another way — pulling up the vines by the roots, but the ground has to be completely wet for this. Wear gloves when you work around these poisonous plants and be careful not to let the spray get on other plants. One friend discovered a poison ivy vine right in the middle of one of his treasured flower beds. He used a paintbrush to put the herbicide just where he wanted it. Luck to you.

Dear Dorothy: We have fairly new windshield wipers, but they were smearing the windshield during a heavy rain. Mentioned it during lunch and an office friend asked if I'd had the car washed and asked for the liquid wax treatment. The answer was yes, and he said after every one of these washes it's wise to wipe off the wipers. He was right. Good tip for everybody. — George Kavey

Dear Dorothy: The reader who scolded

you for using an old toothbrush on a grater annoyed me a bit. What's so "yuk" about that? I put them through the dishwasher cycle, just like any silverware that has been in someone's mouth. It's all in the mind! — Mrs. Bea Fuller point 8 ounce is the granddaughter of the G. B. Simpsons of Palatine and the A. C. Jordans of Chicago.

ALEXIAN BROTHERS
Theresa Lynn Michaelis weighed 6 pounds 11 ounces at birth July 4. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rick Michaelis of Hanover Park, she is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Casey Dykier of Schaumburg, formerly of Elk Grove, and Mr. and Mrs. Claud Michaelis. Theresa has three brothers: Ken Michaelis, 20, Lee Michaelis, 13, and Robert Dykier, 15.

Backgammon

Outfoxing opponent real fun of game

by OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
(Sixth of a Series)

If backgammon were simply a game of rolling dice, you would not need a board or men to move at all. The fun in the game is making the moves which frustrate your opponent's chances while improving your own.

At the start of the game White tries to prevent the two black men on the White 1-point from escaping. White does this by "making points" that will impede Black's progress. The blocking game is achieved by developing a row of uninterrupted made points. Six such points in a row form a barrier which your opponent cannot jump over. The technical term for such a barrier is a prime. Five points in a row would be a five-point block.

You start with your 8- and 6-point made. Making your bar point (the 7-point) will give you three in a row. Adding the 5- and 4-point will make a five-point block. You want to make your 4- and 3-points if you can, since this will make it more difficult for your opponent to enter from the bar should you hit a blot. If, in addition, you can make your bar point, you will set up an effective blockade; provided, of course, that the opposing back men have not already escaped. At the same time, you are attempting to get your two back men to safety.

White rolls 6-3. In the diagram, White has choices in playing his 6-3. He can hit a blot by moving B-1 to B-10. But it's far better for White to move B-12 to W-7; B-10 to W-7, making the bar point and forming a five-point block. It now will be extremely difficult for Black to escape with his back men.

Twirl, rattle and wave...

EACH YEAR the drums rattle and the flags wave as thousands of persons convene at Elk Grove High School for the American Legion drum and bugle corps competition. The intense rivalries among the various corps and marching groups begin early in the day and culminate under the stars during the "Music in the Night" festival. Rifles atwirl, these are the Fox Valley Raiders. (Photo by Bob Finch)

Make opponents play to finesse

Jim: "Anyone can take a finesse. If it works he is a hero — if it fails he can say that he tried. The really good player tries to find ways to force his opponents to take his finesses for him."

Oswald: "South decided to bid six spades and hope for the best. He knew that he might be missing seven and also that even six might not make. After his partner's jump to four spades there just wasn't any scientific way to bid."

Jim: "South played a low club from dummy at trick one. West was not going to underlead an ace against a slam. East played low and South ruffed. Two rounds of trumps were necessary to pull those outstanding. Then South ruffed a second club, cashed his ace and king of hearts, ruffed a heart in dummy, ruffed dummy's last club and led his last heart."

Oswald: "When West produced the queen of hearts, South didn't have to worry about a diamond finesse. He simply discarded a diamond from dummy and left West on lead. West was dead. A diamond lead would take South's finesse for him. A club lead would allow South to discard a diamond from dummy, ruff in his own hand and claim the rest of the tricks on a cross ruff."

Haynie captures U.S. Open with strong putting finish

by PAUL LOGAN

LaGrange — "I was in and out of trouble all day."

That quote could have come off the lips of four outstanding women golfers at yesterday's final round of the United States Open at LaGrange Country Club — Ruth Jensen, JoAnne Carner, Carol Mann or Sandra Haynie.

Each personified the quote by shooting 81, 77, 75 and 73, respectively, over the par 72, 6,268-yard layout. However, only one finished birdie-birdie to win the most prestigious title in women's golf.

Under almost ideal weather conditions, the owner of this sentence — Sandra Haynie — came back from a double bogey on the 16th with two super duper, pressure-packed putts of 70 and 12 feet on the final two holes to win the tournament by a single shot with a 293 total.

Haynie's dazzling finish ruined the 18-hole playoff plans of Mann and Beth Stone, who finished ahead of the dramatists with a one-under-par 71 and watched the proceedings from the press room. Both posted eight-over scores of 296.

"My game plan all week was to try and play consistent golf," said the new Open champion, who had won 31 titles but never this one. "That's what I did until today."

Haynie, who plays out of Dallas, Texas, played with championship steadiness over the first three rounds with scores of 73, 73 and 74. Then she and the three previously mentioned leaders throughout the day began to feel the extreme pressure that's always a part of such a major event.

"That's part of the Open," said Haynie, who pocketed $8,073.75 for her efforts. "My only double bogey was at the 16th."

Haynie, who had won back-to-back titles earlier this season, took a one-stroke lead over Carner going into the par 4, 395-yard 16th. She almost lost the tournament there, taking three putts. "I was a little shaky at that point," she admitted. On that same hole, first Mann and then Haynie did cost themselves the title by taking two shots to get out of bunkers. Both took double bogey sixes.

"After 16, I felt it was all over," said Sandra. "But my playing partner — 'Spuz' (Sandra Spuzich) said, 'There are two more birdies out there.' And she was right."

"The putter that had failed me all week was the very club that won the tournament for me."

Mann, who won the Open in 1963 and has won 32 titles in all, including two this summer, appeared to make the same kind of comeback that Haynie performed. After the disastrous double bogey, she parred the 17th and put her approach right on the pin on the final hole for a tap-in birdie.

Her eight-over-par figure put her in the club house tied with Stone and Haynie, who still had to finish the 18th. But before Mann could sit down with the press and discuss her round, she and the media saw Haynie's putt ("It looked like about 40 (feet)," said the new champ afterwards) roll in.

Stone appeared to be a surprise winner, having toured the southwest suburban club course with a sparkling 71. As the leaders began to fade, she climbed into a share of the lead. But Haynie's putter spoiled Stone's chance to win her first tour event. She had tied for second in the 1967 U.S. Open.

Those who did the fade besides Mann were first Jensen and then Carner. Jensen, who led the tournament going into the final day's play, ballooned to a 40 on the front nine and never did recover, finishing with an 81 and a 300 total.

A pair of double bogey did it for Carner, the second-leading money winner on the tour and a three-time winner so far this year. She took a five on the par 3 14th and a six on the killer 16th, spelling her doom.

Doom was the word for most of the women, who all fought a losing battle with par over the deceiving long golf course. Kathy Whitworth, winner of 71 titles but never the U.S. Open, finished at 297 and tied Carner for fourth.

Following Sandra Post's 298 were Donna Caponi Young and Deborah Massey, the low amateur of the tournament, with 299. The rest of the field — 46 to be exact — finished 300 or higher.

Paddock Olympics to begin in Mount Prospect

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Roughly twenty-four hours remain before the opening day of the Paddock Olympics gets underway in Mount Prospect. Hundreds of youngsters from the area's park districts will gather to compete in softball and tennis Tuesday and again in track and field Wednesday.

At stake will be individual awards and records and a team championship that was won last year by Palatine's park district.

The first day's events will be held at Lions Park Recreation Center, 411 S. Maple, in Mount Prospect. The easiest route to the park is to take either Lincoln or Shabonee Trail off Route 83 to Maple. Just follow the crowds.

The first day will be devoted to tennis and softball with each competing park district fielding teams in the 10-11 age group and 12-13 age group. Each district is expected to furnish both a boys' and girls' team in those age groups.

There are a number of special rules for the softball competition that can be acquired from the various park districts.

The park districts are responsible for providing one boy and one girl only from each of four age groups: 10, 11, 12, and 13 years old.

These players will compete in a single elimination tournament where five games will constitute a set match.

The park officials will draw for slots in the competition and each contestant must provide his own racket and new tennis balls.

The registration procedures for the first day will last approximately from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. with the first softball game and tennis matches scheduled to begin at 9 a.m.

There will be a break for lunch with the competition to resume immediately afterwards. The finals in both the softball and tennis competition are scheduled to begin at 4 p.m.

Track and field will dominate the final day of Paddock Olympics VIII. After again assembling at 8:30 a.m. the first event of the track competition, the 50-yard dash, will begin at 9:15 a.m.

Each of these events has a boys and girls section and they will be run simultaneously on opposite sides of the Palatine track.

Directions to reach the Palatine High School track at 150 E. Wood are to travel west on Palatine Road and turn north on Oak Street. Oak runs into Wood Street.

Following the 50-yard dash will be the 100-yard dash, team shuttle relay and standing long jump.

Following a lunch break the events will pick up in the afternoon at 1:00 p.m. with the girls competing in jump rope while the boys take part in a softball throw.

At 1:30 the boys will start kickball while the girls take their turn at throwing the softball. That will be followed by kickball for girls and then a tug of war.

The culmination of the Paddock Olympics will be the presentation of the team trophy and the distribution of ribbons and patches to the various park district officials.

Five local teams engage in openers

Summer league tourney play begins

The summer league high school baseball season gets bigger and better every year, so it's no surprise that today the largest summer league tourney gets underway.

Vying for top honors are teams from 86 schools in Chicagoland, including 13 from the Herald area. All but five of the local squads received byes on today's schedule. Those schools playing today are: Conant at Maine West, Crown at Prospect, Crystal Lake at Palatine, and Elk Grove at Wheaton-Warrens.

Tomorrow, in second-round action, Schaumburg will be at Rolling Meadows, Wheeling will be at Dundee, Arlington will host Forest View, Fremd will entertain Barrington, Hersey will visit Hoffman Estates and Maine North will be at Buffalo Grove.

Also tomorrow, the winner of the Conant-Maine West game will play the winner of the Cary Grove-Maine South contest. The Crown-Prospect winner will go up against the winner of Crystal Lake-Palatine. And the victor in the Elk Grove-Wheaton game will face the winner of the Hinsdale Central-Wheaton North game.

Continuing round play is slated for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with section championships scheduled for Friday, July 26. Semi-finals will be played July 29 and the finals will be held Wednesday, July 31 at Lewis College.

The Elk Grove Grenadiers collected their third victory of the season in the summer league Friday with a 7-6 decision over the Saxons of Schaumburg.

Jeff Raver picked up the win for the Grens, starting the ballgame and surviving six innings before being relieved.

Jim Maier had a double and an RBI for the Grens while Ray Fairbanks had a two have hit for the Saxons.

Gary Merchant was shackled with the loss.

Scott Green fired a sparkling four-hitter while striking out eight, to lead Rolling Meadows to a 7-0 victory over host Crystal Lake Friday night.

Joe Nunez's two-run double and a single good for two more by Tom Baugh keyed the Mustang attack.

Thursday, Green's two-run safety in the bottom of the seventh gave his team a come-from-behind 5-4 victory over Crown.

Meanwhile, Buffalo Grove was playing to a 4-4 tie at Dundee and Barrington trampled the Wheeling Wildcats 8-3.

Arlington split in its last two games of the week, whipping Fenton, 4-1, and falling to Hoffman Estates in nine innings, 7-5.

Mike Kuehn tossed the win on Thursday, allowing just four hits. John Mertins appeared on his way to an even more impressive pitching performance on Friday. He was rolling along with a one-hitter through six innings against the Hawks as well as leading 5-0. Then the Hawks struck to tie the game and won it two extra innings later.

Hoffman won the game with the help of Joe Gajewski, who started the rally with a single — one of three hits he had for the game. Another key contributor in the ninth was Mike Byrnes, who executed a perfect suicide squeeze bunt to bring in one of the Hawks' two runs.

Ray Gawron was the winning pitcher.

John Vukovich was 3-for-4 for the losers.

Maine West defeated Fremd, 9-8, for the Warriors' 15th win in a row Friday. Coach Don Olson's team displayed clutch hitting and a stellar relief performance by pitcher Al Mueller in extending its summer league record to 18-1.

The South section champion Warriors jumped on Fremd starting pitcher Steve Peters for four runs in the first inning, but Maine West's starter, Mike Kob, couldn't hold the lead. He walked eight and hit a batter in the first three frames, and after four innings Fremd led, 7-6.

But Mueller slammed the door on the host Vikings and the Warriors erupted for three runs in the top of the fifth for the victory. Mueller contributed two doubles to Maine's hitting attack, and Steve Zuccarini, Bill Makuch, Matt Serina, and Bob Smith also helped the Warriors' offense. It was Smith's two-run single in the fifth that drove home the go-ahead markers.

Keith Mallian was the hitting and pitching star for Forest View in the Falcons' 7-6 summer league victory over Prospect. Mallian hurled the entire eight innings and drove in the winning run in Forest View's extra-inning win.

With the game tied in the bottom of the eighth, Forest View's Ron Turner reached second base on a throwing error by the Prospect third baseman. Mallian followed with a single and Turner tallied the game-winning run.

Mallian, who will be a senior in September, had his strikeout pitch working for him Friday. The righthander fanned nine.

Jim Lococo's third hit of the game drove in Roger Murbach with the winning run as Hersey shaded Addison Trail, 14-13, in one of the most unusual slugfests of the summer league season.

The Huskies, trailing 12-4 after two innings, pecked away for five in the fourth, two in the fifth and three in the bottom of the seventh inning to earn the decision. Paul Cortes chipped in with two hits to aid Hersey's unbelievable rally.

Huskie Bob Huber, meanwhile, hurled his second shutout in two outings, a nifty three-hitter as Hersey blanked Fenton, 5-0. The triumph was Huber's third in a row and was supported by Steve Gianini's two-run single.

LINDA BREAKWELL, a Paddock employee, prepares the ribbons and patches that will be awarded to the participants at this week's Paddock Olympics VIII.

AS JOYCE DEESE Benson (right) is demonstrating, the rain was a bit of a problem during the first round of the United States Women's Open hosted by LaGrange Country Club last week. The drizzle stopped early in the afternoon, but the sand traps, as Joycelynne Bourassa is demonstrating, never went away from the testing golf course. Both women found the layout too demanding and failed to make the cut.

Lions sweep doubleheader

The Logan Square Lions wrapped up their season's non-district action with a doubleheader sweep over visiting La Porte Saturday afternoon.

Pat Rooney's triple and single, a double by Steve Bobowski and a one-base rap by Bob Wagner accounted for five Lion runs in their 6-4 triumph in the nightcap, but the run that proved to be the margin of victory crossed in the third when Paul Obuchowski was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded.

Jim Dumke went five innings in earning the win.

SCORE BY INNINGS
La Porte 000 031 0-5-4-2
Logan Square 401 010 X-6-8-1
The locals took a 6-3 decision in the opener behind Gary Gustafson's distance performance.

First inning doubles by Dave Mnichowicz and Art Hoesterey gave the Lions an early 3-0 lead. They put the win on ice in the sixth when singles by Bobowski and Hoesterey, plus an error, gave the hosts three more.

Logan Square's twinbill offense was led by Hoesterey who went 3-for-6 with three RBIs and two runs scored. Bob Wagner added a 4-for-7 showing.

Norwood Park used its only four hits in clutch situations to defeat visiting Logan Square 6-3 in district action last Friday.

The Chicagoans jumped off to a first inning lead on the strength of Pat Loftus' single that chased two across, and a run-producing error. Scott Sandcock's run-scoring two-bagger, and ground ball by Pete Mroz and winning pitcher Joe Corry's RBI single completed the hosts' scoring.

Dumke's base hit and a two-run homer by Rooney produced the Lions' runs. Joe Losas suffered the defeat for Logan Square who, with a 6-14 league mark, finish regular season play in a fifth place tie with the Norwood entry.

Allen's holds narrow league lead

Allen's Men's Store held a small half-point lead over the Bank and Trust of Arlington Heights last week in the YMCA Twilight Golf League. The leader of the league on this weekend can qualify for a spot in the Paddock Publications Golf Tournament to be held August 18.

A single point behind the Bankers were Hilliker Associates with Mount Prospect State Bank and Keffer Roofing tied for fourth a half point behind.

Bruce Campbell and Floyd Birt tied for low net with a 32. Campbell birdied holes 1 and 8 while Birt had a birdie on number 3.

The members of the leading team are Dick Hoyt, the captain, Phil Jensen, Harold Petersen, Karl Rothius, and Howard Rover.

Palatine Hills to host junior tournament

A junior golf tournament, co-sponsored by the Palatine Hills Men's Golf Association and the Palatine Park District, will be held at the Palatine Hills Golf course on August 13.

The 18-hole medal play event will be open to all junior golfers ages 12 to 18.

The players will be divided up into three divisions according to their age.

An entry fee of $1 will be collected when the players sign up at the Palatine Hills Pro Shop. The entry deadline is August 10. All entry fees will be returned to the players in the form of prizes.

Romano's Restaurant, still undefeated in "AA" League play, defeated 11, J. Doyle, 8-3, in a game featuring good defense. Dan Dowd, Romano's second baseman, had eight defensive assists including some very difficult plays to his right and left. Neil Candelieri had a home run for Romano's and Jim Kautz had a double to give Doyle's only extra base hit.

Homa Construction posted an easy "AA" victory over Union Camp, 15-2. Homa collected 12 hits, including a home run by Jim Houshman.

Kevin Weller had a home run as Boomer's Top defeated Kruse's Standard, 11-0. In extra innings, Mark Ackerman drove in the winning run for Boomer's.

Judge's Photos played the defense in limiting Rand Road House to five hits as Judge's went on to win, 9-4. Just and Rutz had extra base hits for Rand Road House and Dick Manning and Ken Dipp were outstanding on defense for Judge's.

Beacon Tap combined 13 hits with several Steve's Lounge errors to defeat Steve's, 15-3. The two teams were tied for first place in their division at the start of the game. Steve's could manage only nine hits as Beacon took an 11-1 lead after three innings.

Ray's Carpets, still undefeated in "A" league play, scored 12 runs in the 5th inning and defeated Winkelman's, 14-7. J. Morris had 3 home runs for Ray's. Gordie Lewis also homered for Ray's, and R. Anderson had a home run for Winkelman's.

Jarocki, Sims — track meet stars

Last Thursday's open track meet at Conant High School again featured the running of Bill Jarocki and Jimmy Sims. Jarocki, the Fremd graduate who now runs for Northwestern won the mile and the half mile for 18-to-29 year olds. His times were 4:20.3 in the mile and a brilliant 1:55.5 in the half. Sims, a 27-year-old from Hoffman Estates, on the 220-yard dash in :23.2 and finished second to Jarocki in the 880 with a time of 2:03.2.

Schaumburg High School's Bruce Mahlig, a state meet place winner in 1974, pole vaulted 14 feet and Conant's Mary Ann Johnson, the state girls shot put champ, heaved the shot 39-5. Ben Appleback of Hoffman Estates won the mile for boys 12 and 13 with a clocking of 5:29.8.

Amy Kurland ran a :28.6 high school 220-dash, Laura Buddenbaum ran a :17.1 low hurdles over 110 yards, and Bev Bidlo turned in a :06.7 50-yard dash.

Other top times were a :10.7 100-yard dash by Rolling Meadows' Greg Bowen, a :41.9 in the 330-yard low hurdles by Meadows' Jim Hupp, and a 2:12.7 by Joe Mortimer in the over-30 class half mile.

Char Anderson of Rolling Meadows clocked a 2:31.7 in the 17-and-under girls half mile, Larry Gramit high jumped 6-4, Boyd Clayton tossed the discus 153-4, and Craig Clendening high jumped 6-2 in the 18-and-over division.

The next meet at Conant, sponsored by the Hoffman Estates Park District, will be Thursday evening. Everyone is invited to enter. There is a 30 cent entry fee for three events.

Softball tourneys begin soon

Entry forms are in the mail and deadline dates are fast approaching for all categories of softball teams desiring to enter the Amateur Softball Associations tournaments.

Junior teams will kick off the action the weekend of July 26-28 with tourneys for the 13-15-year-old boys and girls fast pitch and the 16-18 girls fast pitch. Rockford will host those tourneys and Lincolnwood will follow the next weekend, hosting the 13-15 girls slow pitch. All winners will advance to the National Tourneys.

Women's fast pitch will begin the action in senior play in Aurora, starting August 1. The two finalists will move on to the regional competition in Indianapolis.

Both the women's Metro and Regional Tourneys will be sponsored by the Fox Valley Lassies of St. Charles with the winners traveling to Elk Grove, Cal. for the finals. Men's slow pitch Metro will be co-hosted by Lockport and Plainfield with winners advancing to the regional in Decatur, Ill.

The men's fast pitch tourney will be held at Aurora and Rockford with the winner going to Eau Claire, Wis. for the regional there. Home Savings of Aurora is the defending champ in that regional tourney.

Sixteen-inch play in the Metro Open will be held at Wheaton, and the Industrial Open will be staged at Grant Park. Winners in both tourneys will compete at Dalton, Ga. and they will join the Chicago Bobcats, the defending national champs, in quest of this year's crown.

All teams must be registered with the Amateur Softball Association in order to compete. For additional information on entering the tournament, contact the ASA commissioner, Ferris Reid, at 312-892-0269 or write him at 4 Knollwood Drive, Aurora, Ill. 60058.

Arlington takes 2 from Norwood; drops 1 to Ridge

Final Ninth District standings were threatened with a three-way tie this past weekend, pending games that would pit Park Ridge against Arlington Heights on Sunday and against Wheeling this evening.

On Saturday, Arlington recorded a double-dip clouting over Norwood Park, a team which has dropped out of the post-season tournament due to a lack of pitching.

Arlington's first win, 2-1 in 11 innings, was the resumption of a game that had been tied after eight. Then they won, 12-3, behind pitcher Tim Hals.

That tied Arlington and Wheeling for the Ninth District leadership with 14-5 records. Park Ridge sat in arrears with an 11-6 record and three games remaining, the other against Mount Prospect, scheduled, if needed, for Tuesday.

As of Sunday morning, tournament pairings were uncertain because of the standings problem plus Norwood's withdrawal. However, there will be a Tuesday game at Logan Square.

Jim Vogts scored the winning run in Arlington's 2-1 decision over Norwood. He ran for Mike Saugling who had walked. Vogts stole second and came home on an error in center field.

The second game was no contest, although the losers were ahead 3-2 after four innings. Then the roof dropped as Arlington sent across 10 runs during the last three innings.

Triples keyed all three rallies. Steve Breitball tripled after singles by Brett Frase and Rick Sidor plus two walks in the fifth when Arlington went ahead, 6-3.

Bruce Hanson's triple scored Jerry DeSimone in the sixth when Arlington stranded three runners.

Joe Riplinger's triple was the big hit during the five-run seventh inning. The only other hits were singles from Breitball and George Vukovich as Arlington received four walks.

Park Ridge pitcher Jay Liggett, a Maine West graduate, survived a horrible third inning during which Arlington Heights scored five runs on three hits Friday as he posted a 7-5 triumph at Recreation Park.

The visitors scored twice during the second and third innings against Arlington hurler Carl Pedersen. They came back with a three-run fourth against Don Kamps to assure the victory.

In other action last Thursday, Arlington defeated Logan Square, 6-5, behind the pitching of Tim Hals and Dave Thorstensen. George Vukovich stroked three hits, including two doubles. Jerry DeSimone claimed three singles.

A one-out walk to Vukovich keyed a four-run fifth for Arlington against Logan Square. DeSimone's third hit preceded Joe Riplinger's walk and Tom Good's triple. Brett Frase singled and Bruce Hanson doubled to finish the rally.

That win set Arlington's record at 19-9 with 13 wins in the previous 14 games and eight straight. But the skid ended Friday evening.

Park Ridge rightfielder Bill Harrison singled and Ron Parker reached on DeSimone's error to begin a two-run second inning off Pedersen. Kip Zdeb singled to score the game's first run.

Liggett sent a fly ball out to Riplinger in left field that scored Parker, giving Park Ridge a 2-0 lead.

The visitors attacked again in the third when Jeff Schwarz tripled and Dave Patterson lofted a sacrifice fly, making it 3-0. When Pedersen hit Lyons and Harrison singled, Meyer pulled his southpaw hurler, inserting Kamps. He retired two batters but Park Ridge led, 4-0.

Liggett was strong before falling into trouble when Arlington got all its runs in the third. He fanned Vukovich, DeSimone and Riplinger in the first and faced just four hitters in the second.

Arlington broke through after one out in the third. Pedersen singled and moved up on a wild pitch. Liggett lost it entirely, walking Vukovich, DeSimone and Riplinger as the lead shrank to 4-1.

Good fanned. So there were two outs when Frase stroked a grand slam homer. Arlington led, 5-4.

Dan Myszyk and Liggett opened Park Ridge's fourth with singles off Kamps. After two outs, Patterson doubled for a 6-4 Park Ridge lead. Lyons sent across the game's final run with a single.

Liggett finished strong. After Frase's grand slam homer, the Park Ridge pitcher allowed just one hit, a fifth inning leadoff triple by DeSimone.

CONCENTRATING on her next shot at the United States Women's Open last weekend is JoAnn Prentice. A tour veteran, Ms. Prentice barely survived the cut as she and the rest of the field found the LaGrange Country Club course a challenge. (Photo by Dom Najolia)

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

Head down

AVOIDANCE is the best policy for Mount Prospect second baseman Grog Pfaff as he jumps out of the way of Wheeling's Bob Burke, who tries to break up a double play attempt. The first-inning action came in Mount Prospect's 5-1 victory at Wheeling Wednesday. Burke was out but speedy Jeff Brisson, the Wheeling batter, was safe at first. The regular American Legion season ends today. (Photo by Dom Najolia)

Walsh seeks money for counsel

Chief says Merenkov case 'tars' department

Harry Walsh

Floyd Merenkov

by JOE FRANZ

Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Walsh has termed the case involving suspended patrolman Floyd Merenkov a "tar baby," saying no matter how it is handled the department will get "tarred."

The statement was made last week in a memorandum to Village Mgr. Daniel Larson. In that memorandum Walsh also said the money saved by not paying Merenkov while he is on suspension could be used to pay for Walsh's legal counsel when the matter comes before the fire and police commission.

Although the purpose of the memo is to ask the village board to authorize hiring of legal counsel for Walsh and the commission, it also makes reference to the case against Merenkov and the effect its outcome could have on the department.

WALSH STATED that it is a "difficult case" and "the very concept of authority introduced and strengthened since Harold Smith's (former police chief) departure can rise or fall with it."

Walsh further states, "We have a good case, by the way! I knew that, and the attorney confirmed it. But it's going to be a tough one."

Prior to that, Walsh said, "Because of Officer Merenkov's ugly accusations in the newspapers, this is what you'd call a 'tar baby' as well. Almost anyway you grab it, you're going to get tarred."

Walsh suspended Merenkov 17 days ago and asked the police and fire commission for his dismissal. Merenkov is charged by Walsh with disobeying an order, insubordination and disrespect for a supervisor, taking action derogatory to the department and discrediting the force.

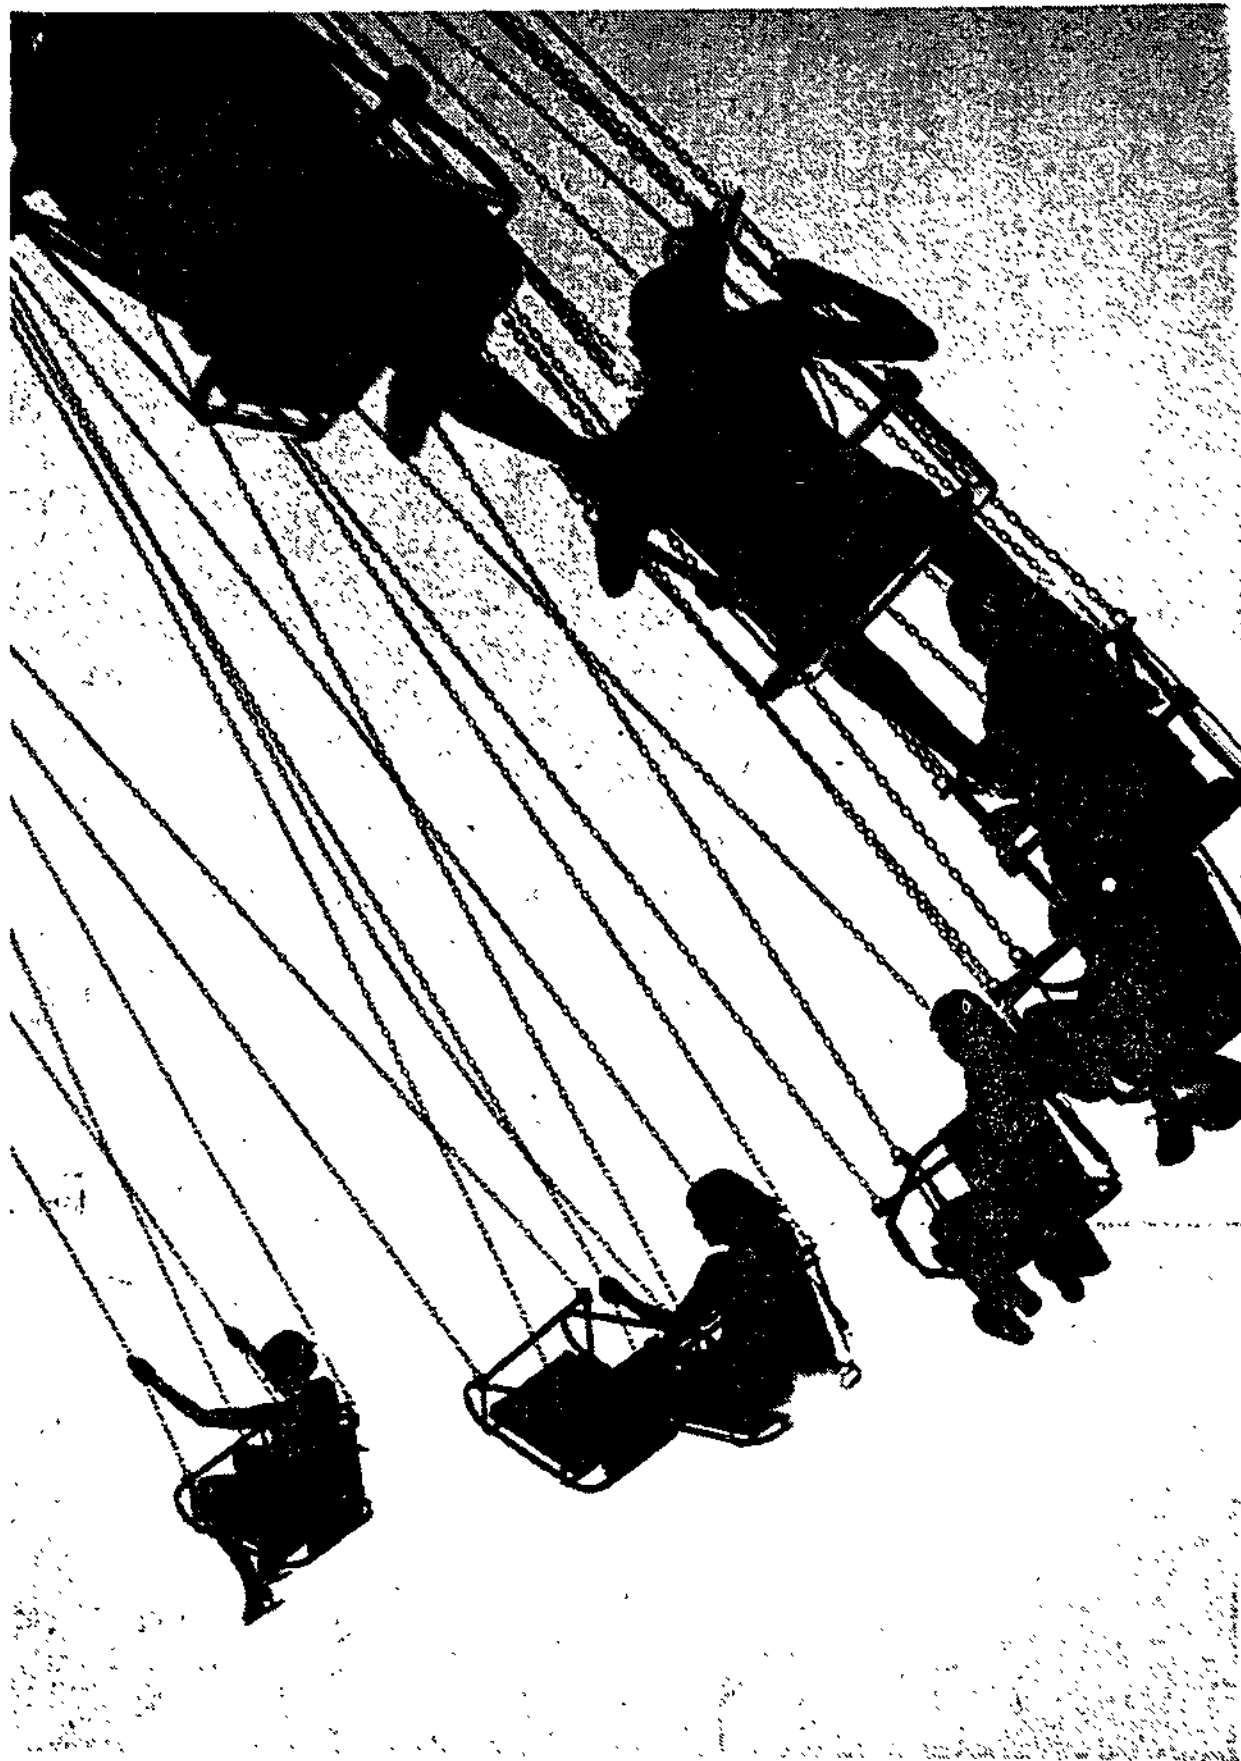

In turn, Merenkov, 27, charged that some sergeants are guilty of theft and misconduct. He said he was suspended for attempting to bring the cases to Walsh's attention so that corrective action could be taken.

THE HEARING before the fire and police commission was convened Saturday, but was continued until July 27. The commission asked that the case be continued until its legal counsel can be in attendance.

Walsh, who continually has refused to make public comments about the case, refused to comment Friday on the memo. "That was an extremely confidential piece of correspondence to the village manager and was not intended to get in the newspaper," he said. "To print that is like window pecking."

Walsh has asked the village board to hire Berle Schwartz to represent the village at the hearing. Merenkov will be represented by Sherwin Kile.

Merenkov has received much public support since his suspension and said he is confident he will be exonerated of all charges. In the meantime, he is working for the fire department for $20 a day.

Public relations position

Debate ends, school board votes to hire Mrs. Reid

The School Dist. 21 Board of Education has agreed 5 to 0 to give Supt. Kenneth Gill the go-ahead to hire former board colleague Mary Joan Reid for a full-time paid position with the district.

The board met in a short executive session following a special meeting last Friday night. Before the session several board members said they had their doubts about the move because, although it is legal, many residents felt there was a "gray area" of unanswered questions about Mrs. Reid's qualifications.

Gill said he showed the board members the applications of all those who applied for the job and said that the board agreed Mrs. Reid was best suited for the full-time position.

THE NINE-YEAR school board veteran, who resigned two weeks ago, did not appear at Friday's special meeting. She now will be hired at a salary of $9,000 per year to coordinate the district's volunteer program and public relations work.

Board Pres. Jack Lane told The Herald earlier Friday that he is planning to recommend that the board pursue a policy that eliminates such situations in the future. Lane said the policy would not allow any active school board member to seek a job in the district until his or her term expired, or they resigned before even applying. It is not known when the board will act on such a policy.

The board now has until Aug. 24 to appoint someone to take Mrs. Reid's place. Anyone interested in sitting on the Dist. 21 board should submit a letter to Lane no later than Thursday. Letters should be sent to the Administration Building, 999 W. Dundee Rd. Wheeling.

IN OTHER ACTION Friday night the board voted 3 to 2 to retain its own attorneys rather than specialists in the Dist. 21 controversy with Temptron, Inc. The company was responsible for installing a security system throughout the district's 17 schools. School officials say, however, Temptron failed to comply with its contract, since the system is not functioning properly.

Board members Kenneth Rodeck and Jeremiah Crise said they wanted attorneys who specialize in such cases to handle the matter. Their counterparts Lillian Stiller, Ed Smith and Lane, however, disagreed and voted to retain the district's attorneys.

Gill said the district will try to work out an agreement with Insurance Co. of America, bonding company for Temptron, in an effort to settle the matter. Gill said no further action will take place until officials have received an answer from INA.

Referendum path may be cleared

The Buffalo Grove Village Board tonight is expected to approve an agreement that would clear the way for a referendum to put the entire village under one fire department.

The agreement would transfer Wheeling Township Rural Fire Protection District real estate to the village when a municipal fire department is formed.

If the agreement is passed, a referendum probably will be scheduled in the northern part of the village in August or September asking that their area be put in the Wheeling district. The village currently is served by three fire districts.

In other business tonight the village board will:

- Review a plan to construct a Pizza Hut restaurant and office building near Buffalo Grove and Dundee roads.

- Review a request from a developer for creation of a special taxing district to pay for improvements on Arlington Heights Road.

- Consider bids for construction of a storm water reservoir at the Arlington Country Club.

- Approve the budget and appropriations ordinance for the 1974-75 fiscal year.

- Review a request for a stop sign at Cambridge Drive and University Court and for a yield sign on Eton Court at Downing Road.

Strikes, 'tight mortgages' blamed

New-home construction down substantially here

The amount of new home construction in Buffalo Grove is substantially down this year, but Village Mgr. Daniel Larson expects at least a partial recovery by the end of the year.

Larson last week blamed the two-month strike by cement and material truck drivers and a "tight mortgage market" as the main reasons for the slow construction year.

The budget predicts that 701 new housing units will drop up during the 1974-75 fiscal year, but Larson said the number likely will be closer to 333. There is an outside chance, he said, that 663 units will be constructed during the fiscal year if three developers, who are currently unsure of their plans, decide to build.

THE VILLAGE estimated that it would receive $216,400 in building permit fees this fiscal year, but Larson said he now thinks the figure will be $152,390, with a slight chance of receiving as much as $195,390.

If more building had taken place up until now, Larson said the village would have gotten more fees from developers and might have been able to avoid selling tax anticipation warrants to meet its expenses. The village board approved the sale of $140,000 worth of warrants last week and is expected to pass an ordinance tonight.

The warrants will be purchased by the Bank of Buffalo Grove, which will charge the village a 6 per cent interest rate. The warrants will be paid back in the fall, when the village receives its property tax money from Lake and Cook counties.

Now that a tentative agreement has been reached in the cement truckdrivers' strike and mortgage money should become more available, Larson predicts construction will pick up.

Higher taxes, costs mean more off-season uses for track

by KURT BAER

Higher taxes and a growing overhead mean additional off-season uses must be found for Arlington Park Race Track, according to a senior vice president of Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of the track.

"Our race tracks are large facilities and we can't afford to hold on to them if we're only going to use them 60 or 90 days out of the year," said Joseph Joyce, contacted by The Herald Friday in his New York office.

Joyce was at the center of a recent controversy in south suburban Homewood after he proposed a rock concert featuring Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young or Elvis Presley at Washington Park Race Track, also owned by Madison Square Garden.

PLANS FOR the concert, which Joyce guessed could have drawn 100,000 persons, were scratched after the musical groups could not be booked.

While there are no specific plans for a similar music fest at Arlington Park, it is likely something will be proposed in the future, Joyce says.

"It is a reasonable possibility that at some time down the road we'll use Arlington Park for a concert," he said. "We don't like to produce a lot of noise where we have horses stabled, though," he added.

It is Madison Square Garden's policy, according to Joyce, to notify municipalities of plans for special events at their facilities.

"We told the village board in Homewood that there was a possibility that we could get Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. They asked for an estimate of how many people might attend and I said at the outside 100,000, and then the rocket took off," he said.

HUNDREDS OF Homewood residents organized in opposition to the planned concert fearing the hordes of pot-smoking, free love-making teen-agers they associate with rock music. They packed the Homewood village hall last Tuesday to protest the concert only to be told by Joyce that the plan had been dropped.

"The tentative date we had with Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young would not come to fruition and then the Elvis thing fell apart."

"But this doesn't mean we wouldn't try to do something at some other time," Joyce said.

The concert planned for Washington Park was scheduled at a time when the race track is dormant — a condition that will prevail at Arlington Park after this year's racing ends Sept. 7.

In accord with Joyce's comment on the economic necessity of off-season uses for Arlington Park are the plans for a private housing at the track being drawn by the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development firm.

"We're still meeting with Madison Square Garden. I hope we can get back to the village's plat and subdivision committee before too long," Arthur Gingold, Richards Group president, said Friday.

ONE PRELIMINARY plan included several 20-story high-rise apartment buildings on the race track property north of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Gingold has declined to discuss details of the housing plan before it is presented to the plan commission's plat and subdivision committee.

"We're still working with it," he said.

Appropriately enough, the Richards Group of Illinois is a subsidiary of Madison Square Garden Corp.

Stevenson High counselor setup to be revised

The Stevenson High School Dist. 125 Board of Education has approved several changes in the guidance program at Stevenson High School in response to suggestions made by a citizens' committee.

The board appointed the citizens' committee to study the functions of Stevenson guidance counselors and recommend ways of improving services for students. Similar committees were appointed at the same time to evaluate the freshman studies and math programs at the Prairie View school which serves the Lake County section of Buffalo Grove.

In response to the 16 guidance committee suggestions, Supt. Harold Baner submitted 29 recommendations to the board, most of them supporting the committee's action.

THE BOARD decided that in the future, students will be assigned to the same guidance counselor for their entire high school career. Previously, students received a new counselor each year.

Baner said it will be September, 1975, before this practice will be fully implemented because it will be necessary to train present counselors in all phases of the guidance program. Currently, each counselor specializes in a particular field such as college counseling.

Under the new plan, each counselor will provide counseling services in all areas associated with high school programs. This will include, among others, the fields of academic, business and vocational guidance.

A new counselor, to be added to the staff this fall, will be assigned to the freshman class.

A NEW guidance information system (GIS) is being installed in the Stevenson guidance department this fall to assist counselors and students in career and college counseling. According to Edwin Ellis, business manager, it is expected that the system will be made available to adults and other interested schools on a low cost basis.

The board also has approved the continued expansion of the advisory system which will include juniors next year. Advisors are teachers who spend a portion of their time as advisors to a group of 20 to 30 students on both an individual and group basis. During the past two years, Baner said the system has been found to be very successful.

Generally, advisors will be assigned to the same students throughout their high school careers, Baner said, but some exceptions will be permitted. Advisors will work closely with guidance counselors and will be given in-service training in skills and techniques.

The school board discussed requiring advisors to make home visits. However, some board members questioned the costs in time and money which might be involved and the matter was referred to the board's education committee for further study.

THE EDUCATION committee also will review present Stevenson graduation requirements, early graduation, the administering of ACT and SAT examinations, the feasibility of a tracking system and continuation of the advisor-interview program for entering freshman students.

Next fall, student registration forms, which require a parental signature, will include the name of the course as well as the course number. Any changes in the student's program will require an additional parental signature.

Sample programs will be included in the curriculum bulletin that will outline appropriate four-year high school programs for entry into specific types of colleges and universities. A chart to be included in the bulletin will list the minimum requirements for admission into a variety of colleges and universities. All the information will be distributed freely to parents as well as students.

Robert Anderson, school board president, praised the excellent work of the three committees on guidance, mathematics and freshman studies and thanked them publicly at the board meeting on behalf of the board, staff and the community.

According to the usual procedure, the three committees have been disbanded after filing their reports.

IT'S NOT ALWAYS EASY to bring a smile to a sick child's face, but Jack Thum Thee Clown tries, with jokes, candy, magazines and a big red smile. Kim Maefe of Schaumburg is one child Jack tried to cheer up when he visited the pediatrics wing of Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

'Better than medicine'

Jack Thum Thee Clown loves children, and the feeling happens to be mutual

by FRAN SLIMMER

Jack Thum's been clowning around the state for the past 15 years, and vows to do it the rest of his life.

He dons his colorful baggy suit, big red nose, curly wig and big flipper-like shoes seven days a week, to entertain at parties, promotions and picnics. He also makes volunteer visits to children in hospitals and orphanages twice a week, including one to the Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

"Once I get that costume on, time doesn't matter," Thum said. He may be hired for three hours, he said, but he'll stay around as long as he gets children to laugh.

"We all need a little laughter," he said. "There's so much grief in the world."

THUM LOVES children, and while he has none of his own, he has raised 16 foster children. "I haven't had a Christmas without a child with me," Thum said.

"A child is a child to me," he said, whether the child's healthy, sick or handicapped. "As long as he has a smile and feels wanted, he's the same to me. They're all God's children — and I'm the biggest one."

Thum remembers when he was a child who spent two years in a hospital, paralyzed with rheumatic fever. He recalls how he felt when someone came in to cheer him up. Now he visits children confined in hospitals and orphanages. "I, Jack Thum Thee Clown, will go to them and make them happy."

Thum said he was "gifted" with the talent to be a clown. He had been a salesman and was always joking around before he became Jack Thum Thee Clown.

"I don't think there's another clown in the business who goes by his real name," he said.

HE USES A big rubber thumb as a prop in his act. "I ask the kids what they would call me if I didn't have my thumb," he said. "They always say 'Fingers.'"

Thum likes to have children assist him in his act, which includes a few simple magic tricks.

Thum invited a little boy with an ear-to-ear grin help him make "magic popcorn" Thursday at Alexian Brothers. Thum sprinkled "magic corn" and "magic salt" in a "magic pan," and instructed his assistant to hit the pan with a magic wand.

"If you keep hitting like that you're going to make a chicken fly out," he warned his rather enthusiastic helper.

Thum visits hospitals with cartoons, full of surprises — get-well cards, bubble gum, tootsie pops and magazines, props for magic tricks and handcuffs to hang on to reporters

to make them smile and forget their ills.

ONE HOSPITAL, St. James in Chicago Heights, said Thum is "better than medicine," when it comes to taking the pain away from a sick child. "They call me 'TLC — tender loving care,'" he said. Other hospitals have claimed him as "their clown," he said.

Thum does radio and television spots, has performed at McCormick Place and recently gave the key to the City of Harvey to Gov. Daniel Walker. Soon he'll be visiting Dixon State Hospital, which he does several times a year. Also, Illinois Central Hospital wants to send him to an orphanage in Poland, he said.

"I'm looking for my own TV show," he said.

It takes Thum two hours to put on his clown face — white skin with a big red nose, bulbous red nose, blue-painted and glittered designs on his face and blue sideburns. "Can you guess how many hours a day I spend in this makeup?" he said. Sometimes it's most of the day. He always drives, in costume, to his performances.

"My costume's not frightening," he said. "I'm a happy clown with a happy face." He likes to make children smile, he said.

"It's the most beautiful thing in the world to give children something to be happy about," Thum said. "I wouldn't give this up for a million dollars — and believe me, I've had offers."

Barons state champs

The Buffalo Grove Barons juvenile corps was recently named state champion in the juvenile dance twirl corps division in competition sponsored by the National Baton Twirling Assn.

The Buffalo Grove Barons junior baton corps placed second in the junior military corps division of the same contest July 13-14 at Buffalo Grove High School.

Local individuals who scored high in the contest included Kim Senne, Debbie Allan, Lynn Cochrane, Terri Marshall, Charlene Burgess, Brooke Bartlett and Nancy Lehman.

Mill Creek swim pool closed by village

The outdoor swimming pool in the Mill Creek subdivision has been closed by Buffalo Grove inspectors until the apartment management repairs the filtering system.

Chief Inspector William Dettmer said Friday the pool was ordered closed last Tuesday for "health and safety reasons." A week before the closing, a plumbing inspector ordered the management to repair the faulty filtering system, Dettmer said.

"They were given a week to make the repairs, but they didn't, so we shut them down," Dettmer said. "It's definitely a serious problem and will be taken care of before we allow them to reopen."

Pool hours increased for family swimming

The hours at Willow Stream Pool in Buffalo Grove have been increased Monday through Thursday evenings to permit family swims.

The pool will be open to children and their parents on those evenings from 7 to 8 p.m. Only children accompanied by parents or guardians will be allowed in the pool at those times.

General public swims on the four evenings will be from 8 to 9:30 p.m. The pool previously was only open from 7 to 9 p.m. for general public swims and had no time allotted for family swims on those evenings.

The park board recently decided to change the times and increase the hours of the pool at the request of several residents.

Banser urges architect for Stevenson addition

Hiring an architect to design an addition for Stevenson High School was suggested by Dist. 125 Supt. Harold Baner in his annual state of the school report last week.

Target date for the addition is September, 1976.

The report given to the school board last week included comments on the need for additional classroom space, public hearings, a program management plan, monitoring the current program plan, hiring evaluators, closer cooperation with elementary schools and setting up a grievance procedure with the Stevenson faculty.

He encouraged the school board to hold public hearings this fall to report on the program plan, developed by the community, teachers and other Stevenson staff last year.

"IN ORDER TO achieve the high goals that have been set for us in the plan, it will be necessary for us to continually review the target dates and be sure that the goals are being accomplished," Baner said.

On the subject of accountability, Baner said, "The board should continue to investigate a system of program management that will make this school accountable for results, as well as dollars."

Discussing evaluation of programs at the high school, Baner advised the school board education committee to investigate the need for and procedures for selecting an independent program auditor or evaluator. Baner said he has a list of individuals and firms available to do the job.

The superintendent also urged the board to actively support efforts to increase cooperation between the Dist. 125 school board and elementary school boards. "The ultimate goal of this activity must be the improvement of the quality of education within the area," he said.

BANSER SAID setting up a grievance procedure with the faculty would be "a desirable thing and will be good for the school and the community."

Commenting on next year at Stevenson, Baner said significant events will be visitations and evaluations by the North Central Assn., the state superintendent's office and the Division of Vocational and Technical Education.

"These visitations will occur simultaneously in November, and I am sure will provide a great deal of worthwhile information for future deliberations and decision-making," he said.

The recent decision by the school board to offer a traditional structured curriculum for ninth graders as well as the freshman studies program will "have great significance during the coming year."

"THERE IS NO question in my mind that such an option for a structured type of program is an important and positive alternative in the Stevenson High School plan," he said. "Every effort will be made to provide the finest program possible."

Another improvement, the superintendent said, has been the expansion of the advisory program to include juniors.

Advisors are already provided at the freshman and sophomore levels and next year, for the first time, will also be established at the junior level.

In the report, Baner emphasized the need to educate all youth in the community and provide a wide selection of programs and challenges that will fill the needs of college and non-college bound students.

Considered 'most serious crime'

City's robbery rate more than doubles, report shows

by JOHN MAES

Robbery, considered by police officials to be "the most serious crime in Des Plaines" more than doubled for the first half of this year, according to the police department's second quarter report.

The number of robberies, armed and those committed without weapons, rose from seven to 15 incidents and along with increases in other crime categories, such as vandalism and burglary from autos, contributed to an over-all jump of 7 per cent in the city's crime rate.

Police Lt. Mike Clark said that most robberies in Des Plaines have been committed by gunmen at small, convenience-type grocery stores.

"Those kinds of food stores are at the mercy of the stickup artist," he said. The small food stores, usually clerked by one or two people, are easy prey for holdup artists, late at night. Most armed robbers have narcotics habits to support, he said.

"THEY LIKE THE easy cash," said Clark. "Nobody gives them a hard time, especially late at night."

He said police have intensified watches over the food stores and service stations, also a favorite holdup target.

City patrolmen often will stop in the parking lot of the frequently-robbed stores to write a report and act as a deterrent "just by being there."

The numbers of such robberies probably would decrease if more store owners would install robbery alarms, said Clark. "If there were an alarm and we could be alerted within 15 to 20 seconds after the suspect has left, the chances for an apprehension would be much greater."

Clark said he favors adopting city ordinances requiring small stores to install robbery alarms, the same way sprinkling systems and health measures are required.

THE REPORT reflected a jump of 7.8 per cent in serious crime in Des Plaines. The category, which includes murder, rape, aggravated assaults and batteries, burglaries and thefts, numbered 656 incidents so far this year.

The 1973 half-year total for comparable crime was 562.

There were 18 aggravated batteries reported to police this year, an increase of 18.2 per cent over the 15 reported last year. Aggravated assault rose from seven to 10, a 30 per cent increase.

Although burglaries, another crime category that police say is taking disturbing turns, decreased, the number of Union affiliation poll angers school custodians

by LINDA PUNCH

Custodians and maintenance men in Des Plaines Dist. 62 are "outraged" at the board's decision to poll them on union affiliation, said Ed Cristoni, president of the Custodians-Maintenance Assn.

Cristoni said Friday that the CMA membership considers the board's calling for a representative election, a move "to break up" the union.

"We are of the opinion that the board members are acting in bad faith," Cristoni said. "They've had our negotiation package since April 29 and at this time moment they decide to hold a representative election."

DIST. 62 BOARD members voted last week to poll CMA members on whether they wanted the union to represent them in 1974-75 contract negotiations. Board Pres. James Kremers said the action was prompted by the CMA's recent affiliation with the Illinois Education Assn.

"We want to satisfy ourselves that we are dealing with people who represent the majority of the employees," Kremers said.

Kremers denied Friday that the board was acting in bad faith by holding the representative election so late in the year. He said the board had been waiting for advice from its attorney before taking any action.

"The resolution had to be passed at a public meeting, Monday (July 15) was the first chance we had," he said.

THE BOARD PRESIDENT said a representative election is a "common practice in labor-management relations" and that the board is not trying to undermine the CMA.

"The union is asking to be the sole bargaining agent — we're merely anxious to be satisfied that it is a true representative of the majority of the people," he said.

Cristoni said 85 per cent of CMA membership voted in February to affiliate with the IEA. The CMA is the first non-teacher group in the area to join the teachers' union.

"We've given the board membership photostats showing that 27 of our 38 members joined the IEA," Cristoni said. "After Thursday night's meeting (when the representative election was announced), we received six more pledges."

THE CMA PRESIDENT said a negotiations agreement with the board said the union can "choose representatives to bargain for us." Jo Anderson Jr., a regional representative of the IEA, is now serving as negotiator for the union.

"I assume that is the problem," Cristoni said, adding that he thought the representative election was an attempt "to crush the whole (negotiations) process."

"Any kind of election could only be used to break us up," he said. "The membership is positively outraged — we're more unified now than ever."

Kremers said no new bargaining session has been set for negotiation of the 1974-75 contract. Last year's contract expired July 1.

Fish story raises some stink...

A story that unfolded a week ago Sunday during a short but torrential rainfall still left residents at the Methodist Campground in Des Plaines holding their noses to avoid the odor of dead and decaying fish.

Des Plaines Fire Dept. reports said last Wednesday the storm filled up areas of the normally shallow Power Creek and brought with it several thousand scavenger carp.

The creek connects with the Des Plaines River and the fish apparently swam in when rains caused the creek to rise.

When the water receded, the carp became trapped and died leaving an odor residents of the area along Campground Road called "terrible."

Last Tuesday, city firemen hooked up several hundred feet of hose and tried to wash the dead fish back into the river, after Auguste Mathieu, general manager of the camp ground, told firemen he tried unsuccessfully to get county agencies to come and rid the creek of the dead and decaying fish.

Over the weekend, Campground Road residents reported the smell was lingering even though most of the fish had been flushed back to the river.

Funding, maintenance prime topics

Parks to discuss bikeway

Officials from six area park districts, including Des Plaines will meet next month to discuss ways to fund and maintain an eight-mile bikeway plan outlined in a Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission report.

Details for the path, estimated to cost between $33,000 and $40,000 per mile depending on the type of construction used, were released recently in an NIPC feasibility study on the project.

At the Aug. 13 meeting, park district officials will discuss alternatives and possible problems in paying for the bikeway and its upkeep.

EXCEPT IN Des Plaines, the path will run along right-of-way property owned by Commonwealth Edison Co. through the Glenview, Morton Grove, Niles, Skokie and Golf-Maine park districts.

In some areas the path will be exclusively for bicycle traffic and would be laid out so that cyclists can ride to schools and shopping outlets in their communities. Maine North High School and Golf Mill Shopping Center in Niles would be accessible by way of the path.

In Des Plaines, the route would run along approximately 2.5 miles of land owned by the park district. The proposed path would run west along Church Street from Potter Road where it would turn south on Lyman Avenue and cut west again on Ballard Road to Garland Place.

Dempster Street would continue the bikeway west to the Busso Road intersection and then turn southeast on Campground Road to where it would end south of Algonquin Road, according to the study.

NO COMMONWEALTH Edison right-of-way is within local park boundaries however, and Park District Director Robert Kunkel expressed concern over bicyclists and motorists sharing city side streets.

He mentioned the Ballard Road stretch as the only area where a bicycle-only path could be constructed.

"Campground Road is pretty narrow," he said. "There's no shoulder there and the rest of the bikeway would be located along residential side streets."

The city already maintains a 16-mile bike route through town and Kunkel said the NIPC path "could tie in" from city bike routes.

There also is some fear that problems with the overall NIPC plan may develop between one or more of the six districts over sharing costs.

PARK OFFICIALS will be faced with the decision of whether each district should construct and pay for its own trail or if the cost of the standard trail should be divided equally.

Part of the problem involves the Morton Grove Park District, where 4.3 miles or more than 50 per cent of the trail would be located.

If park representatives decide each district should be responsible for its own path, Morton Grove would have to pay for more than half the cost of the total project despite the fact that six park areas are involved.

David Huber, general superintendent for Morton Grove parks, said financing that large a share of the cost could be a problem if it is decided that each park district build its own connecting path.

The NIPC report points out, however, that 70 per cent federal funding with highway trust money may be available for the project.

'Better than medicine'

Jack Thum Thee Clown loves children, and the feeling happens to be mutual

by FRAN SLIMMER

Jack Thum's been clowning around the state for the past 15 years, and vows to do it the rest of his life.

He dons his colorful baggy suit, big red nose, curly wig and big flipper-like shoes seven days a week, to entertain at parties, promotions and picnics. He also makes volunteer visits to children in hospitals and orphanages twice a week, including one to the Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

"Once I get that costume on, time doesn't matter," Thum said. He may be hired for three hours, he said, but he'll stay around as long as he gets children to laugh.

"We all need a little laughter," he said. "There's so much grief in the world."

THUM LOVES children, and while he has none of his own, he has raised 16 foster children. "I haven't had a Christmas without a child with me," Thum said.

"A child is a child to me," he said, whether the child's healthy, sick or handicapped. "As long as he has a smile and feels wanted, he's the same to me. They're all God's children — and I'm the biggest one."

Thum remembers when he was a child who spent two years in a hospital, paralyzed with rheumatic fever. He recalls how he felt when someone came in to cheer him up. Now he visits children confined in hospitals and orphanages. "I, Jack Thum Thee Clown, will go to them and make them happy."

Thum said he was "gifted" with the talent to be a clown. He had been a salesman and was always joking around before he became Jack Thum Thee Clown.

"I don't think there's another clown in the business who goes by his real name," he said.

HE USES A big rubber thumb as a prop in his act. "I ask the kids what they would call me if I didn't have my thumb," he said. "They always say 'Fingers.'"

Thum likes to have children assist him in his act, which includes a few simple magic tricks.

Thum invited a little boy with an ear-to-ear grin help him make "magic popcorn" Thursday at Alexian Brothers. Thum sprinkled "magic corn" and "magic salt" in a "magic pan," and instructed his assistant to hit the pan with a magic wand.

"If you keep hitting like that you're going to make a chicken fly out," he warned his rather enthusiastic helper.

Thum visits hospitals with cartons full of surprises — get-well cards, bubble gum, tootsie pops and magazines, props for magic tricks and handcuffs to hang on to reporters with. Children sometimes react rather shyly to him, he said, but he likes to make them smile and forget their ills.

ONE HOSPITAL, St. James in Chicago Heights, said Thum is "better than medicine," when it comes to taking the pain away from a sick child. "They call me 'TLC — tender loving care,'" he said. Other hospitals have claimed him as "their clown," he said.

Thum does radio and television spots, has performed at McCormick Place and recently gave the key to the City of Harvey to Gov. Daniel Walker. Soon he'll be visiting Dixon State Hospital, which he does several times a year. Also, Illinois Central Hospital wants to send him to an orphanage in Poland, he said.

"I'm looking for my own TV show," he said.

It takes Thum two hours to put on his clown face — white skin with a big red smile, bulbous red nose, blue-painted and glittered designs on his face and blue sideburns. "Can you guess how many hours a day I spend in this makeup?" he said. Sometimes it's most of the day. He always drives, in costume, to his performances.

"My costume's not frightening," he said. "I'm a happy clown with a happy face." He likes to make children smile, he said.

"It's the most beautiful thing in the world to give children something to be happy about," Thum said. "I wouldn't give this up for a million dollars — and believe me, I've had offers."

Dist. 59 wrapup3 policy changes to be acted upon

Three policy change proposals were read to the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education recently and will be acted on at the next board meeting.

These proposals concern contracts between the board and the superintendent, executive sessions and employment of relatives.

The first proposal states that the board shall negotiate a contract with the superintendent and the contract should last no longer than three years. The board would evaluate the superintendent annually, and during the last year of the contract, consider another three-year contract.

However, if either side wishes to not renew the contract, it must notify the other side at least 90 days before the contract expires. Failure to do so would automatically extend the contract one year.

Also the board heard a proposed policy to compose a press release after executive sessions at which no action is taken. Board members would be expected to not elaborate on the statement.

This policy was intended to "protect Dist. 59 personnel for the public discussion of information which, by its very nature, is discussed in executive session," the policy states.

The third policy proposal is to prohibit the employment of members of the immediate families of any administrator. This is "to prevent the possibility of favoritism in treatment of any employee," the policy states.

Policy committee meetings will be held Thursday and Monday, both at 7:30 p.m. in the Dist. 59 Administration Center, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

Records policy changed

The board has changed a policy concerning students' cumulative records. Students' records will be reviewed annually and obsolete information will be eliminated, the new policy states. The information is available to parents and other qualified persons, as determined by the administration. For example, the drawing a student did in kindergarten would probably be out of his folder by third grade, Supt. James Ertvi said.

Shelving bid accepted

The board accepted a bid from Dallas Co., to provide library shelving for Robert Frost School for $2,918.83. The library at the Mount Prospect school is being renovated and reorganized.

IASB membership renewed

The board voted to renew until September, 1975, its membership in the Illinois Assn. of School Boards, paying membership dues of $1,732.

"Let's use them as much as we can," board member Emil Bahnmaler said of the IASB. "We're paying for them, let's use them." The IASB is a professional organization of school boards.

Dist. 63 wrapup*School will start 15 minutes later

The East Maine Dist. 63 Board of Education has approved new hours for the elementary and junior high schools.

The board decided last week to sit back the school day 15 minutes so students wouldn't be walking to classes during the early morning darkness. The school day at the elementary schools and Apollo Junior High School will be from 8:45 a.m. to 3:05 p.m. Students at Gemini Junior High will attend classes between 9:15 a.m. and 3:35 p.m.

The new hours were approved by the board despite a recommendation by Supt. G. Allan Gogo that the school day remain the same. He cited a survey of parents which indicated that 791 parents wanted the 8:30 a.m. starting time, 704 parents the 8:45 a.m. starting time and 346 parents the 9 a.m. starting time.

Gogo also noted that many parents already send their youngsters to school "long before classes begin." He said, "My concern is for the children on school grounds 45 to 50 minutes before school and who is going to supervise them."

Board members Barbara Kipnis and Jerry Aborn said the majority of parents voted for hours other than the 8:30 a.m. starting time indicating they wanted a change.

"There's still a problem of kids walking to school in the dark," Mrs. Kipnis said. "I'm especially concerned about the areas where there are no sidewalks and kids are walking in the streets."

Board member William Allen said he sympathized with the students who turn up early at school but he was "personally in favor of 15 more minutes light in the morning."

"I think we have to set up a schedule. If parents are inflexible enough that they can't change their lifestyle then we'll just have to make provisions," he said.

Salary increases approved

Salary increases for 15 administrators were approved by the board.

The salaries, effective Aug. 1, are Louis Bers, Apollo Junior High School assistant principal, $17,607; Cesare Caldarelli, Wilson School principal, $22,543; Margery Dick, Metzer School principal, $18,393; Milo Heilman, Washington School principal, $22,397; Richard Hetke, Stevenson School principal, $18,143; Donald Huebner, Gemini School principal, $21,993; Robert Jablon, Mark Twain School principal, $20,493; Kenneth Johannsen, Oak School principal, $20,643; Stewart Liechik, Nathanson School principal, $20,443; James Lumb, Apollo Junior High School principal, $19,593; Raymond Owens, Nelson School principal, $18,693; Lenore Page, assistant superintendent, $22,215; Kenneth Panczyk, Gemini Junior High School assistant principal, $17,757; Walter Siekierski, Ballard School principal, $19,393; and Donald Stetina, assistant superintendent, $20,215.

In related action, the board approved expanding the professional staff to include seven learning disabilities resource room teachers; four social workers; two resource teachers and a guidance counselor for Apollo; a reading coordinator for Gemini; two district resource teachers and one full time and one half time classroom teachers for Gemini.

Approval was also given for nine learning disabilities aides, a junior high learning disabilities aide and two physical education teachers aides for Apollo.

DESPITE SNUFFING out the firemen 12-9, the Belles were not without flaw as this throw eludes a frustrated second baseman. The firemen had to wear boots during the contest as a handicap. The game is held annually.

Dancer, bartender cleared of charges

A dancer and a bartender at the Dolphin Motel in Maine Township have been cleared of obscenity charges stemming from a Cook County Sheriff's Police raid in May.

The dancer, Gisela Howell, 24, and William DuFor, 31, were acquitted last week in Harwood Heights branch of Circuit Court by Associate Judge John J. Kelly Jr.

Kelly dismissed the case for lack of evidence during a jury trial after Julie Echoles, the attorney for the lounge, 9621 Greenwood, asked the case be dismissed.

Miss Howell had been charged with performing an obscene dance and DuFor was charged with presenting an obscene performance.

burglaries from autos jumped 52 per cent.

Clark said that most often, the object of the auto burglary is a tape deck. He said that constitutes the "overwhelming majority," of the total that jumped from 55 to 84 incidents, according to the report.

BURGLARIES decreased 11 per cent, from 156 to 138 for this year, but Clark said more and more daylight burglaries are being reported.

He attributed that upswing partly to the current national situation where more wives and children are working, leaving more homes and apartments unoccupied during the day.

Thefts jumped 9 per cent from 282 to 308 while a slight drop was seen from 29 to 26 in auto thefts.

Less serious crimes showed a 14 per cent jump.

VANDALISM, A constantly increasing offense jumped another 23 per cent. The increase was reflected in figures that showed 328 incidents so far in 1974, compared with 265 last year at this time.

Clark also said that many residents do not report damage to property, probably because they feel there is nothing police can do.

Among increases and decreases in other minor crime categories were:

- Simple assault dropped 13 per cent from 57 to 49, but simple battery rose by two incidents, 11 to 13. Those offenses are not considered major crimes by police.

- Deceptive practices showed a drop of 20 per cent, from 35 to 29 for this year.
- The 126 offenses involving children, such as contributing to the delinquency of a minor, reported this year, were one more than the 125 that occurred in the first half of 1973.

- There were 31 per cent more narcotics offenses this year over last. The category rose from 19 to 25 and marijuana violations rose from 10 to 15, a 50 per cent increase.

Kindergarten signups under way here

Preschool Educational Center, 9000 Home Ave., Des Plaines has announced the opening of registration for their new kindergarten facilities.

Emphasis will be placed on a regular kindergarten curriculum with the goal of having the children read by the end of the year. Classes will be small, allowing for individual attention and permitting the child to progress as his or her ability allows.

Classes will be held from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. beginning Sept. 3. Experienced certified teachers will be in charge of the program.

Fall preschool and day-care registration also is open. Full or half-day sessions are available in the day-care program.

For further information on the PEC programs call 296-5644.

Maryville bid letting by this fall?

Architects designing the new Maryville school say they hope to let bids on the project by late September or early October.

Anthony J. Siros, of Fields, Goldman and Magee, Mount Vernon, Ill., architect in charge of the project, said Friday work is proceeding on architectural drawings for the building. Architects met Thursday with the Illinois Capital Development board to review the project's progress.

Siros said further meetings with the ICDB are planned before the go-ahead for bidding is given by the board, which is overseeing the project.

The ICDB is providing about $1 million for the construction of the school, which will serve students from Maryville Academy in Des Plaines who are wards of the state. The new school will replace River Road School, which does not meet state life safety codes.

ARCHITECTS HAD set a tentative September deadline for letting bids on the project but Siros said postponements in review sessions with the ICDB have made October a more likely target date.

Siros said last week's review meeting with the ICDB was routine and board members instructed architects to proceed with work on plans and drawings.

Siros said nothing has impeded architects from maintaining the general timetable they have set for completion of the project. A target date of September, 1975, has been set for occupancy of the new school.

The chief architect admitted, however, that due to construction price increases, planners had to scale down design plans to keep in line with the money that has been appropriated for the project.

NO ADDITIONAL funds for the project are available, Siros said because the money for the work came from a special appropriation voted by the Illinois General Assembly.

Bidding on the project will begin after both the ICDB and the River Trails Dist. 26 Board of Education approve the final architectural plans. The new school will be under the jurisdiction of the Dist. 26 board just as River Road is now.

'Pd demand replacement,' horticulturist

Expert backs homeowner in dispute over new sod

by JERRY THOMAS

"If it was my sod lawn I'd demand replacement," said a horticulturist who has examined an Elk Grove Village homeowner's newly laid yellowed sod and pronounced it dead.

James Fizzell, horticulturist with the University of Illinois Agriculture Extension Service in Des Plaines, said a sample of sod brought in by Susan Conroy, 1287 Parker Pl., was "cooked."

Mrs. Conroy is angry about a $640 sod job performed by Northern Nurseries of Niles last week. The day it was laid it looked like a checkerboard, and every other row appeared dead, she said.

Fizzell said the sod apparently was heating while waiting in rolls for installation. "It simply cooked, destroying all the top green growth," said Fizzell.

HE SUPPORTS Mrs. Conroy's contention that the nursery laid dead sod instead of sod going dormant as the nursery sales field manager contends.

Fizzell agreed with Northern's contention that sometimes when sod is first installed it turns brown and top green growth dies off. "But the crown (a very small part of the grass about the size of a grain of rice) stays alive close to the root and sends out little rhizomes that eventually start the greening process again," he said.

Fizzell said the samples he inspected showed most of the crown dead with some crowns still barely alive but not enough to insure recovery of the sod.

"I've given Mrs. Conroy a letter substantiating that the sod simply cooked itself to death in those tight rolls in the hot sun and was not dead from drought or overwatering," he said.

MRS. CONROY told The Herald Thursday that Art Parr, field manager for Northern, who installed her lawn, at first promised replacement if the sod did not take root within six weeks after installation.

"Now, since we have been complaining to him he just tells us we overwatered it and refuses to even speak to us," said Mrs. Conroy.

Parr told The Herald Thursday Mrs. Conroy's concern is premature. He maintains the sod will eventually turn green and that many times grass yellows or browns out but returns.

Parr was unavailable for comment after Fizzell's report Friday but reportedly contacted a clerk in Fizzell's office and requested that Fizzell test a sample of sod he is concerned about. The clerk said Parr will mail in the sample and did not state where it was from.

Two other families on either side of the Conroy's house on Parker Place have the same "checkerboard" lawn.

Another former customer of Parr's, Mrs. Ann Miller of 1151 S. Glen Tr., supports Parr and says her lawn is now the showpiece of the neighborhood and looked just like Mrs. Conroy's when it was first laid.

"It took several weeks, probably nearly six, before it started getting green again, but it eventually did and now two years later it's beautiful," she said.

Community service cops will be sworn in Tuesday

Elk Grove Village Police Dept. community service officers will be sworn in at 8 p.m. Tuesday during the village board meeting.

The 10 men and one woman have completed a 40-hour community service officers' training course under the direction of Lt. Richard Lasch, service unit division commander in charge of department training.

Chief Harry Jenkins said the designation CSO will now be applied to both newly hired community service officers and cadets currently on the force and those hired in June.

The CSO will continue in-service training with sergeants and patrolmen. On Aug. 8, Sgt. Jerry Walsh and Patrolman Richard Rusch will instruct in the areas of "Implied Consent," "Making the Felony Arrest," and "Search and Seizure."

CSO's are uniformed officers with the power to cite residents for violating village ordinances.

THEY WEAR IDENTIFYING light blue-and-navy uniforms and the Elk Grove Village Police Dept. shield, but will use special three-wheel vehicles instead of patrol cars.

The CSO's duties do not include enforcement of criminal code violations or felony investigations. Their duties are limited to non-criminal complaints, record keeping and complaint filing.

Chief Jenkins said the new department will perform an important function as a police department community service. He added that much of the department's work is service oriented and the CSO's will free patrolmen and officers for criminal investigation.

Burglary nets $6,711 in nickel

An apparently musclebound burglar hauled away $6,711 worth of nickel Saturday from the Elk Grove Plating Co.

The burglar, police said, used a hand truck to cart off four drums of Inco "S" nickel weighing 551 pounds each from the Plating Co., 770 Lunt, Elk Grove Village.

The burglary was reported to police about 7:30 a.m. Saturday by Louis J. Brosia, part owner of the company. According to reports, the burglar entered the building through a window 15 feet above the ground by pushing a piece of equipment against the wall and hoisting himself up to the window. He then broke into the storage room adjacent to the main office and stole the nickel.

School district criticized in handling of deaf children

Letters from parents of two deaf children in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 criticized the district's handling of their children and placement into special education classes.

The parents of David Copeland said they disagreed with the district's special education director, James Briggs, in placing their son, a first grader, with kindergarten students at Link School. Although he will receive individualized instruction on the first-grade level, they said he needs to be integrated with students his own age in a group learning situation.

"We want him with other kids at his own level," said Mrs. Clyde Copeland, 357 Washington Blvd., Hoffman Estates. The Copelands have requested that their son be bused to Wilnot School in Deerfield where he could be enrolled in a class with four other first grade children.

WILNOT is operated under the North Suburban Special Education District. Dist. 54 is connected with a different cooperative, the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization. Briggs said these groups operate in an arrangement which would allow the Copelands' son to attend Wilnot.

However, he questioned whether David would receive a better education at Wilnot. He said Dist. 54 is attempting to keep special education students at schools in the immediate area so that they could be integrated into the regular classes whenever possible.

He also said the cost difference between Wilnot and Link's programs is considerable. It costs the district about $1,500 to send a deaf child to Link while it costs about $2,400 to send him to Wilnot plus transportation costs.

Briggs also questioned the length of time a child would be on the bus to get to Wilnot.

Mrs. Copeland disagreed, saying, "If it's what he needs I don't care how long it takes him to get there." She said he used to spend almost two hours on the bus to get to school in Elk Grove Village and that he could spend that much time again to get to Wilnot.

MRS. RON BOYCE, 806 Duxbury Ln., Schaumburg, also presented the board with a letter charging the district with inadequate handling of deaf children and deficient methods for determining the proper class for her daughter, a second-grade student.

Mrs. Boyce said NSSEO offered too little flexibility and that the attitude toward placement was "where can we assign her with what is available" rather than "what is best for her needs."

She said her daughter has attended three schools since they moved into the area three years ago.

Last year Mrs. Boyce's daughter was placed as a first-grade student in a class where preschool and kindergarten deaf students are placed. The other students in her class were younger.

ALTHOUGH HER DAUGHTER is classified as deaf, Mrs. Boyce said her daughter can communicate with verbal language having come from an oral program in Kansas City, Mo. Her teacher integrated her daughter into first-grade classes at Link, however she couldn't handle a full regular class schedule, Mrs. Boyce said.

In March her daughter was placed in Forest School in Des Plaines which offers a more complete oral program. However, Mrs. Boyce was later informed this also was not the proper program for her daughter.

She objected to these placement difficulties and the problems she encountered trying to get her daughter in the right program. "It seems improper that an up-rising by parents is necessary to get it right," she said.

Thum likes to have children assist him in his act, which includes a few simple magic tricks.

Thum invited a little boy with an ear-to-ear grin help him make "magic popcorn" Thursday at Alexian Brothers. Thum sprinkled "magic corn" and "magic salt" in a "magic pan," and instructed his assistant to hit the pan with a magic wand.

"If you keep hitting like that you're going to make a chicken fly out," he warned his rather enthusiastic helper.

Thum visits hospitals with cartons full of surprises — get-well cards, bubble gum, tootsie pops and magazines, props for magic tricks and handcuffs to hang on to reporters with. Children sometimes react rather shyly to him, he said, but he likes to make them smile and forget their ills.

ONE HOSPITAL. St. James in Chicago Heights, said Thum is "better than medicine," when it comes to taking the pain away from a sick child. "They call me 'TLC — tender loving care,'" he said. Other hospitals have claimed him as "their clown," he said.

Thum does radio and television spots, has performed at McCormick Place and recently gave the key to the City of Harvey to Gov. Daniel Walker. Soon he'll be visiting Dixon State Hospital, which he does several times a year. Also, Illinois Central Hospital wants to send him to an orphanage in Poland, he said.

"I'm looking for my own TV show," he said.

It takes Thum two hours to put on his clown face — white skin with a big red smile, bulbous red nose, blue-painted and glittered designs on his face and blue sideburns. "Can you guess how many hours a day I spend in this makeup?" he said. Sometimes it's most of the day. He always drives, in costume, to his performances.

"My costume's not frightening," he said. "I'm a happy clown with a happy face." He likes to make children smile, he said.

"It's the most beautiful thing in the world to give children something to be happy about," Thum said. "I wouldn't give this up for a million dollars — and believe me, I've had offers."

Higher taxes, costs mean more off-season uses for track

by KURT BAER

Higher taxes and a growing overhead mean additional off-season uses must be found for Arlington Park Race Track, according to a senior vice president of Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of the track.

"Our race tracks are large facilities and we can't afford to hold on to them if we're only going to use them 30 or 90 days out of the year," said Joseph Joyce, contacted by The Herald Friday in his New York office.

Joyce was at the center of a recent controversy in south suburban Homewood after he proposed a rock concert featuring Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young or Elvis Presley at Washington Park Race Track, also owned by Madison Square Garden.

PLANS FOR the concert, which Joyce guessed could have drawn 100,000 persons, were scratched after the musical groups could not be booked.

While there are no specific plans for a similar music fest at Arlington Park, it is likely something will be proposed in the future, Joyce says.

"It is a reasonable possibility that at some time down the road we'll use Arlington Park for a concert," he said. "We don't like to produce a lot of noise where we have horses stabled, though," he added.

It is Madison Square Garden's policy, according to Joyce, to notify municipalities of plans for special events at their facilities.

"We told the village board in Homewood that there was a possibility that we could get Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. They asked for an estimate of how many people might attend and I said at the outside 100,000, and then the rocket took off," he said.

HUNDREDS OF Homewood residents organized in opposition to the planned concert fearing the hordes of pot-smoking, free love-making teen-agers they associate with rock music. They packed the Homewood village hall last Tuesday to protest the concert only to be told by Joyce that the plan had been dropped.

"The tentative date we had with Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young would not come to fruition and then the Elvis thing fell apart."

"But this doesn't mean we wouldn't try to do something at some other time," Joyce said.

The concert planned for Washington Park was scheduled at a time when the race track is dormant — a condition that will prevail at Arlington Park after this year's racing ends Sept. 7.

In accord with Joyce's comment on the economic necessity of off-season uses for Arlington Park are the plans for a private housing at the track being drawn by the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development firm.

"We're still meeting with Madison Square Garden. I hope we can get back to the village's plat and subdivision committee before too long," Arthur Gingold, Richards Group president, said Friday.

ONE PRELIMINARY plan included several 20-story high-rise apartment buildings on the race track property north of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Gingold has declined to discuss details of the housing plan before it is presented to the plan commission's plat and subdivision committee.

"We're still working with it," he said.

Appropriately enough, the Richards Group of Illinois is a subsidiary of Madison Square Garden Corp.

Dist. 54 wrapup

Cost of milk, hot lunches to go up

Lunch costs will increase in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 next year. Hot lunches at the junior high schools will cost 60 cents each, an increase of 5 cents.

Milk also will increase to 28 cents for five-carton coupons at junior high schools and 33 cents for five-carton coupons at elementary schools. Milk cost 5 cents a carton last year.

The increased hot-lunch cost should prevent the program from needing subsidies if the same number of lunches are sold, said Arlene Czajkowski, board member. She said Madison Square Garden Corp. that supplies the hot lunches has informed the district the price of lunches will increase from 48.8 cents to 52 cents starting Oct. 1. The remaining 8 cents covers administrative costs.

Hot lunches were discontinued in the elementary schools by board action in June.

The milk increase was necessitated by the increase for milk from Modern Dairy that was approved by the board. Modern Dairy increased the cost of milk to the district from 67 cents to 8.5 cents a carton.

Because the district offers a hot-lunch program in the junior high schools, the district received federal subsidy of 3 cents a carton at the junior highs while it only receives 2 cents a carton at the elementary schools.

Budget ready for public

The tentative budget for the 1974-75 school year is available to the public at the business office of the Administration Building, 804 W. Bode Rd., Schaumburg.

The budget anticipates a total revenue of $18,608,350 and total expenditures of $17,912,223 for a surplus of $696,023. This compares with last year's anticipated revenue of $15,200,150, expenditure of $15,198,400 for a surplus of $14,750.

The public hearing on the budget will be held Sept. 5 at 8 p.m. at Helen Keller Junior High School, 820 W. Bode Rd., Schaumburg.

Observatory deck OKd

A deck adjacent to the observatory at Eisenhower Junior High School was approved for construction by the Board of Education.

Construction costs were limited to $2,400. The Eisenhower observatory with its celestron telescope was completed this year for public use. A deck was requested for better access to the observatory.

The observatory at 800 W. Hassell Rd., Hoffman Estates, is open to the public Friday from 9 to 10 p.m.

Einstein may not be ready; alternate plans not set

Alternate plans for students who should be attending Einstein Elementary School have not been established, said Milton Derr, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 associate superintendent.

Einstein, in Hanover Park, is scheduled to open Aug. 29, the first day of school. However, because construction has been delayed by Ranke-Climo and Associates, contractor for the project, the building may not be completed by that date.

The Board of Education Thursday terminated Ranke-Climo's contract because the company had run into financial difficulties that delayed the completion of the building. Originally, the building, at 111 Laurie Ln., was scheduled to be finished in December, 1973.

ABOUT 100 STUDENTS will need to be placed in other schools if the building is not completed by Aug. 29. This includes physically handicapped students scheduled for the special education courses that will be offered at Einstein.

The major problem, said Derr, is subcontractors have refused to complete their construction until they receive payment for the work already done and a guarantee to receive payment for the remainder of the work.

The district had been paying Ranke-Climo, who in turn was to pay the subcontractors. Often Ranke-Climo either did not pay subcontractors or paid the subcontractors with checks that bounced.

TOTAL CONSTRUCTION costs for the building are $818,886. To date, $693,733 has been paid by the district. Thursday night the board withheld approval for payment of an additional $26,815 until settlement of the terminated contract is reached.

Most of the construction work for Einstein is completed said Derr. "It could be ready in a matter of days," he said. "We are still highly hopeful that the building will be completed by someone by that date."

The roof was completed this week and the building is now watertight, he said. "That's one of the few things that is completely done."

Ranke-Climo received notice from the district June 20 that the contract would be terminated if work was not completed by July 10, the revised completion date promised by a company representative.

SINCE THAT DATE little has been done on the building, said S. Guy Fishman, architect for the school.

With the termination of the contract, the bonding company for the project, Travelers Insurance Co., will step in and decide how to complete the job.

The district also sent notice that it will seek collection of $21,000 of liquidated damages at $100 a day for the 210 days the building was past the anticipated completion date.

Another problem in the construction of Einstein has been vandalism, Derr said. The district estimated that about $10,000 worth of vandalism occurred since construction started.

Jay boundary change coming?

by FRAN SLINIMER

Boundaries for John Jay School in Mount Prospect may be gerrymandered to send some children from new and planned apartment complexes to Des Plaines schools.

A boundary change is the most feasible solution to having from 100 to 200 new students attend already overcrowded Jay school, the Elk Grove Township Dist. 50 boundary committee decided last week. The committee eliminated other alternatives, which included buying mobile classrooms, building an addition to Jay, holding split shifts at Jay or busing one grade level to empty space in another school.

The boundary change, proposed by committee secretary Jan Schulz, calls for an estimated 85 children from three apartment complexes along Busse Road to be bused to Brentwood School in Des Plaines. These complexes, none of which are built yet, are Crystal Towers, Forest Cove and Laurel Estates.

MRS. SCHULZ also proposed that the estimated 69 children from a planned townhouse development at Ill. Rte. 58, west of Briarwood, be bused to Robert Frost School in Mount Prospect. Another 23 children who would come from 19 homes to be built, would still be able to go to Jay, she said.

The children from apartments would have been bused to school anyway, she said, whether they went to Jay or another. She said she chose Brentwood and Frost schools because both would be under a capacity, even with the additional students.

Also, she said, these children would still live in the same junior high school area — Dempster — as their classmates.

The only problem with this proposal is that it gerrymanders, Mrs. Schulz said.

"Who cares if the map is gerrymandered as long as the children aren't?" committee member Marilyn Magsamen asked.

OTHER MEMBERS suggested sending the 85 children from along Busse Road to the other Des Plaines schools, High Ridge Knolls, Devonshire or Einstein.

High Ridge Knolls students now go on to Dempster, but students from the other two schools go to Friendship Junior High School.

The committee decided to postpone action until next week, after it received information from Supt. James Ertvi. The committee wants to know whether the four Des Plaines schools and Frost School would have the physical space to take on the additional children. All schools would be under capacity even with the proposed changes, but they might not have any empty classrooms, committee members said.

The committee is expected to make a final decision on a boundary change at its meeting Tuesday, at 7:30 p.m. in the Dist. 59 administration center, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights. The principals of the six elementary schools being discussed will be invited to attend. A public hearing on the committee's decision will be held July 31, at Friendship Junior High School, 550 Elizabeth Ln., Des Plaines.

"Emotions Anonymous," a group similar to Alcoholics Anonymous for persons with emotional concerns, has begun meeting regularly in Mount Prospect.

Sessions meet from 8 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays at the Lutheran Church of Marsha and Mary, 606 W. Golf Rd. They are open to the public, at no fee.

Planners table asphalt plant conversion plan

An asphalt and concrete mixing plant that is willing to change its present use of a 6.5-acre site if Elk Grove Village accepts its annexation petition was put off by plan commission members last week.

Commission members continued the public hearing on The Rock Road Construction Co. petition because some questions arose about the firm's construction plans for a warehouse and industrial plant.

The asphalt plant now operates as a mixing plant on the east side of Elmhurst Road near the Rogers subdivision adjoining Elk Grove Village.

Rock Road's present operation is not permitted under current zoning. Company officials told commission members in the annexation petition they are willing to end operation of the plant and use the land for industrial use or a warehouse facility if the village will accept its annexation petition.

Rock Road officials will bring their architects and engineers to the continued annexation hearing Aug. 15 at the municipal building, 901 Wellington Ave.

Old refrigerator stolen from school

A burglar stole an old refrigerator from Elk Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd.

Police said the burglar used a school hand truck that was outside the home economics classroom to trundle the gold-colored appliance out of the building. The burglar did not take a newer appliance, but stole the used refrigerator valued at $50.

Sterling silver set stolen from home

Burglars stole a sterling silver tea set and coin collection from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Winkle, 680 A. Versailles, Elk Grove Village, Friday according to police reports.

The burglars entered the home through an unlocked kitchen window and took the tea set, worth $1,500, and coin collection, valued at $300.

Mrs. Winkle discovered the theft about noon Friday after returning from visiting her husband in the hospital.

Trustees to hear apartment plans rejected by zoners

A proposal for a huge housing development and shopping center near the Old Madrid apartment building has been rejected by the Palatine Zoning Board of Appeals, and will be brought before the village board tonight.

The zoning board, in a 4-1 decision with one member abstaining, Thursday voted to reject plans for nine apartment buildings, an 18-acre shopping center, a 10-acre recreation and commercial development and 8-acre office and commercial development.

Howard Sellergren, owner and developer, is seeking to build the new complex in place of three 14-story apartment buildings already approved by the village and a 26-acre commercial development.

The development is planned for 66 acres at Northwest Highway and Hicks Road.

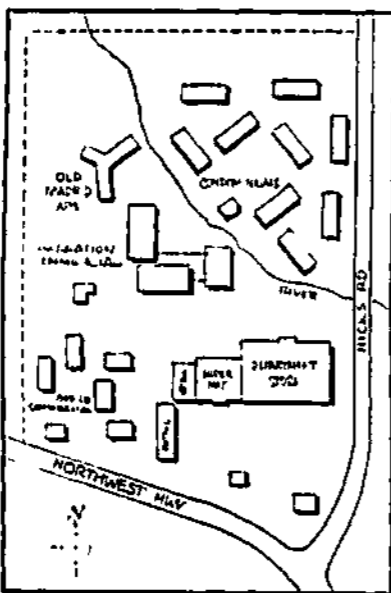

VILLAGE OFFICIALS said the proposal will probably be sent to the village board's planning, building and zoning committee for further study Monday.

Among a list of reasons for rejecting the proposal, zoning board members said Sellergren's plan provides "too much flexibility" for the developer, and charged Sellergren with not providing information requested by the board.

The proposal, board members said, did not include maximum height limitations for buildings, and they complained about a provision which would allow builders to move buildings slightly away from where specifications now read.

The provision would allow builders to move the buildings as long as no more than 10 per cent of the building is moved outside of its proposed location.

"I think the petitioner has failed to provide a lot of information asked of him

THIS PLAN WAS rejected by the Palatine Zoning Board of Appeals Thursday. The 66-acre development plan was submitted by Howard Sellergren, who developed the Old Madrid apartments.

by this board," said Phillip Chouinard, a board member. "Instead, they've tried to tell us the information isn't necessary."

DAVID KUH, chairman of the zoning board, said the developer gave the board "no assurance the buildings are going to be placed where he says they are going to be."

Chouinard also criticized the plan for being "full of holes."

John Duffy, Sellergren's attorney, said he was "gravely disappointed" with the zoning board's decision.

"The board has given us a fair hearing, but we're very disappointed with the results," Duffy said. "This will have a significant effect on the village board. It will seriously consider this recommendation."

Stewart Bossel, proposed developer of the 18-acre commercial site, told the board that he and Sellergren have made "sincere, honest, and diligent efforts to answer questions," but added, "some of your requests have been totally unrealistic."

PALATINE VILLAGE Pres. Wendell Jones said Friday, that if the village board shares the same concerns of the zoning board, it too might deny Sellergren's request.

He said members of the boards may be taking a "gamble," hoping that Sellergren will not go ahead with original plans for three 14-story buildings.

Jones said some members of both boards may be hoping Sellergren will come back with a more "amiable proposal."

Palatine Trustee James Shaw said Friday he would be inclined to "rely on the zoning board's decision and agree with it."

He added, "This would be my first inclination without studying the board's action."

Bud Maney, president of North View subdivision Homeowners Assn., expressed disappointment with the zoning board's decision.

"Frankly, we'd just like to see this thing resolved," Maney said. "Sellergren's proposal was a lot better than the three 14-story buildings."

IF GRASS CLIPPING DISPOSAL is a hassle for the average homeowner, the problem is tenfold for the lawn maintenance man. But George C. Fischer, who has a lawn maintenance company in Arlington Heights, has a solution much to the dismay of some Palatine residents. Fischer recycles grass clippings on a lot on Carter Street in unincorporated Palatine Township to form organic mulch. The ecological advantages of the recycling are disputed by some who complain it is an eyesore, stinks and breeds mosquitoes and rodents. A representative of the Environmental Protection Agency investigated the lot but found no health hazard or violation of the EPA since the lot is used only for temporary storage.

County cemetery a 'shock' to official

A Cook County representative said he was shocked Friday by the negligent condition of the county-owned Sayles Cemetery in Palatine Township.

Robert Matthews, of the county management department, surveyed the pioneer cemetery, which is concealed by overgrown trees from Long Grove Road and Astor Avenue, where it is located. As he snapped pictures of the 1.15-acre site and glanced at headstones to catch dates, he agreed that the cemetery was "in worse condition than he thought," and that "the county and township should work together in restoring" the grounds.

Matthews was instructed "by his superiors," he said, to take a look at Sayles and Old Plum Grove Cemeteries, both county-owned. Avery V. Wolfrum, chairman of the Palatine Township Cemetery Board, has been urging the county to restore the cemeteries, or turn their ownership to the township for restoration.

THE CEMETERY board presently is restoring Cady Cemetery, which is owned by the township, and intends to have the two county-owned pioneer cemeteries restored. The township however, has said that it does not want to pay for the restoration of a cemetery it does not own.

The county is willing to give a right of entry to the township to work on restoring the shambled cemetery. But it is questionable whether funds will be available for the county to join in or completely take charge of restoration, Matthews said.

"It's not that the county doesn't care about its property. I think that my being out here indicates that the county is at least a little interested in the restoration of this cemetery," Matthews said.

"The county's aware of this problem now, and I think that if the county has any pride, that it would see to it that this cemetery is restored," he said.

MATTHEWS WILL make a report of his findings and pictures of his visit to Sayles Cemetery to county officials. He has no idea when or in what manner the report on the county property will be acted on.

Matthews said that the one ready solution, which would be for the county to turn possession of the cemetery over to the township, is almost impossible.

The county was given possession of the Sayles Cemetery in the early 1800s under a law making it difficult to transfer the land deed, he said.

Since the township will not restore the cemetery unless it owns it, it seems as though the township and the county will have to work together if the cemetery is to be restored, Matthews said.

Wolfrum and Matthews agreed that the property would require the clearing off of overgrown trees and thick shrubbery. Garbage and household rubble would have to be cleared off of the grounds, which also would have to be fenced in to keep vandals out. Eventually, grave-stones and markers would be reconstructed, and graves distinguishably marked.

Centner findings Tuesday?

The Palatine Police and Fire Commission may make its findings on eight charges against Robert Centner, former police chief, available to the Palatine village president Tuesday.

Paul Jung, commission chairman, said the commission has requested that additional corrections in the findings be made before it is made public.

Commission attorney, William Littlejohn, is making the corrections and will not be finished until Tuesday, Jung said.

Jung will deliver seven copies of the findings to Palatine Village Pres. Wendell Jones when they are completed. Jung said he would leave to Jones the decision when to distribute the findings to the village board members, public and press.

Centner was forced to resign by the village board June 23, 1973. The board said Centner lacked effective administration abilities, conducted poor drug control programs and did not enforce overweight truck restrictions. A five-month series of hearings were held on the charges against Centner to determine the validity of the charges.

Centner has served as a lieutenant in the Palatine Police Dept. since his resignation. Jerry Bratcher has been the Palatine police chief since January.

Subdivision quits rural park district

The Thunderbird Estates subdivision is expected to be disannexed from the Palatine Rural Park District at a rural park district meeting today.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. at the Prince of Peace Church, 1190 N. Hicks Rd., Palatine.

Park board members informally voted in favor of disannexation at a meeting last month. The Thunderbird Estate's residents' petition for disannexation has been on file for 30 days with the park district attorney as required by law.

Thunderbird residents intend to join the Barrington Park District as soon as the district passes an ordinance annexing the Thunderbird area, which it is expected to do at its next meeting.

EDWIN BARTZ, rural park district commissioner and Thunderbird Estates resident who headed the petition, said the residents have received support and acceptance for annexation from the Barrington Park District.

Thunderbird Estates residents have Barrington mailing addresses, and use the Barrington schools and fire department services. Most of the residents use nearby Barrington Park District facilities under a nonresidential fee.

The petitioning residents feel isolated from the rural park district because they are located in the district's northwest area bounded by Northwest Highway, Hillside Avenue and Ela Road, Bartz said.

THUNDERBIRD ESTATES residents filed a petition for disannexation from the rural park district more than one year ago. The petition required revision by law to include verification that there was no bonded indebtedness, special assessment or unpaid real estate taxes for the area when the disannexation occurs.

The rural park district attorney, Roger Bjorvik, also is expected to make a report on the $350,000 general obligation bonds that were issued at the district's June meeting.

A general discussion of a possible 1975 merger with the Palatine Park District also is expected to take place at tonight's meeting.

Engineers say village halting flood-control plan

Preparation of Palatine's comprehensive flood-control plan is several months behind schedule because the village has not supplied the engineers with necessary information, according to the engineering firm preparing the plan.

The comprehensive flood control plan originally was expected to be released prior to October but probably will not be ready until February, 1975.

The problem is that the village has not supplied Consoer, Townsend and Associates with a compilation of data from a citizens' questionnaire on flooding problems. This information is necessary before any work can get started, said Walter Hodel, an engineer with Consoer and Townsend.

THE VILLAGE deadline for getting the information to the engineers was June 17, but the compilation has not even started, said Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig. Harwig is meeting with Hodel this week to determine just what information the engineers need. After this is determined a computer will be programmed and the questionnaires processed, said Harwig. This may take another couple of weeks to complete, he added.

The timetable in the village's $25,000 contract with Consoer and Townsend for the comprehensive flood-control plan calls for completion seven months after the questionnaires have been tabulated.

Hodel said a decision by the Metropolitan Sanitary District on a solution to the combined sewer problem in Palatine also is holding up the comprehensive flood-control plan. A preliminary engineering study has proposed 17 alternate solutions to the combined sewer problem.

The comprehensive flood-control plan will include proposed solutions to flooding problems throughout the village and cost estimates. The solutions are expected to include additional pumping stations, retention basins and storm sewers.

Village officials have indicated a village-wide flood-control referendum may be necessary to finance the proposed solutions.

Abandoned site may be savings and loan home

The site of the abandoned Sunoco service station at East Frontage Road and Kirchoff Road in Rolling Meadows is being considered as a possible location for the St. Paul Federal Savings and Loan Assn. city branch.

The site is being considered along with several others along the south side of Kirchoff Road, Joseph Sculli, vice president of the savings and loan, confirmed Friday. The association is still considering locations in the Topps-National shopping center but no decision has yet been made on a definite site, Sculli said.

"I would imagine we're talking about a four-to-six-week process," Sculli said. He said officials of the association are currently negotiating for real estate on which to build the S & L's Rolling Meadows branch, which received charter approval from the state last week.

THE SUNOCO site was recently annexed to the city along with a number of other parcels and the Philippe subdivision at the Kirchoff Road and Ill. Rte. 53 intersection. The service station, which has been abandoned for a number of months, had been a sore spot with the city since zoning for the station was approved by Cook County over the city's objections several years ago.

St. Paul officials and city officials toured the city's Kirchoff Road business district Friday reviewing possible locations for the S & L branch. Both the Sunoco site and the Topps shopping center site are commercially zoned and could accommodate the depository branch.

The association may have to seek zoning variations, however, to allow free standing signs and drive-up window banking booths.

"If we decide on one of the locations, we would make application to the city as soon as possible for a special zoning commission to be formed," Sculli said.

THE TOPPS SHOPPING center had been originally eyed for the location of the $475 million Chicago-based association's city branch. Three locations in the shopping center, one immediately east of the Union 76 service station, one in the middle of the shopping center parking lot along Kirchoff Road and the third on the east end of the parking lot, had been offered to city officials for consideration.

City officials had indicated they would prefer the east end location to avoid traffic congestion at the Kirchoff Road-Meadow Drive intersection.

"The Topps lot is still a possibility," Sculli said Friday. He added the association is still hopeful it can open at least a temporary facility in the city before the end of the year.

"We still have the outside hope that we will," he said. He said as soon as a decision is made on a permanent location for the S & L, the association will probably make application to the city to allow a temporary facility to begin business.

Both the Sunoco and the Topps sites comply with the terms of the association's petition to the state requesting a Rolling Meadows charter for a site on the south side of Kirchoff Road between Ill. Rte. 53 and Meadow Drive, Sculli said.

The St. Paul facility would be the first savings and loan association in the city. The Bank of Rolling Meadows now is the only depository in the city, with the Plum Grove Bank on Algonquin and Wilke roads scheduled to open in August.

Police clear 150 youths from Arlington Hts. park

More than 150 youths were cleared from Pioneer Park late Friday when Arlington Heights police ordered the park closed after finding evidence of narcotics and liquor.

The action was ordered at approximately 10:30 p.m. after officers patrolling the park found beer cans and bottles and varying quantities of drugs in the interior of the park where some 150 to 175 youths were congregated.

The park was closed for the remainder of the night by police order. Two park district employees present at the time concurred with the closing order, although one told police he has allowed youths to drink in the park after 9 p.m. as long as no vandalism takes place.

According to police, drugs found in the park included tablets of valium, tablets marked ASN, tablets possibly containing amphetamines and a small quantity of marijuana.

No arrests were reported. Police said more than half the youths in the park at the time were from Rolling Meadows.

Vandalism, looting and youth problems have plagued the park at 500 S. Fernandez. The park has been closed on other occasions because of rowdy youths and incidents.

A report on Friday's incident was to be sent to Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson and Arlington Heights Park District officials.

Cancer Society names kiddie carnival head

A junior at Fremd High School in Palatine recently was named the 1974 Kiddie Carnival Chairman by the Northwest Suburban Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Glenn Killoren, 1495 Dunbar in Inverness, will contact local children and assist them in sponsoring backyard carnivals, proceeds from which go to the American Cancer Society.

More than $700 was raised through carnivals last year, which helped to pay for cancer research.

Killoren is the editor of the high school paper, and assisted the American Cancer Society with a bike-a-thon on May 19, which raised $10,000.

Alcoholism topic of Chamber meeting

Alcoholic programs available to industry will be the topic of the Palatine Chamber of Commerce and Industry luncheon meeting at noon on Friday at Uncle Andy's Cow Palace.

Fred Wachter, an industrial alcoholism consultant for the State of Illinois Dept. of Mental Health, will be the guest speaker. It is estimated that alcoholism costs every business $2,000 annually per employee.

Tickets for the luncheon are $3.50 per person and are available from the Chamber of Commerce, 101 S. Northwest Hwy.

IT'S NOT ALWAYS EASY to bring a smile to a sick child's face, but Jack Thum Thee Clown tries, with jokes, candy, magazines and a big red smile. Kim Haaf of Schaumburg is one child Jack tried to cheer up when he visited the pediatrics wing of Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

'Better than medicine'

Jack Thum Thee Clown loves children, and the feeling happens to be mutual

by FRAN SLIMMER

Jack Thum's been clowning around the state for the past 15 years, and vows to do it the rest of his life.

He dons his colorful baggy suit, big red nose, curly wig and big flipper-like shoes seven days a week, to entertain at parties, promotions and picnics. He also makes volunteer visits to children in hospitals and orphanages twice a week, including one to the Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

"Once I get that costume on, time doesn't matter," Thum said. He may be hired for three hours, he said, but he'll stay around as long as he gets children to laugh.

"We all need a little laughter," he said. "There's so much grief in the world."

THUM LOVES children, and while he has none of his own, he has raised 16 foster children. "I haven't had a Christmas without a child with me," Thum said.

"A child is a child to me," he said, whether the child's healthy, sick or handicapped. "As long as he has a smile and feels wanted, he's the same to me. They're all God's children — and I'm the biggest one."

Thum remembers when he was a child who spent two years in a hospital, paralyzed with rheumatic fever. He recalls how he felt when someone came in to cheer him up. Now he visits children confined in hospitals and orphanages. "I, Jack Thum Thee Clown, will go to them and make them happy."

Thum said he was "gifted" with the talent to be a clown. He had been a salesman and was always joking around before he became Jack Thum Thee Clown.

"I don't think there's another clown in the business who goes by his real name," he said.

HE USES A big rubber thumb as a prop in his act. "I ask the kids what they would call me if I didn't have my thumb," he said. "They always say 'Fingers.'"

Thum likes to have children assist him in his act, which includes a few simple magic tricks.

Thum invited a little boy with an ear-to-ear grin help him make "magic popcorn" Thursday at Alexian Brothers. Thum sprinkled "magic corn" and "magic salt" in a "magic pan," and instructed his assistant to hit the pan with a magic wand.

"If you keep hitting like that you're going to make a chicken fly out," he warned his rather enthusiastic helper.

Thum visits hospitals with cartons full of surprises — get-well cards, bubble gum, tootsie pops and magazines, props for magic tricks and handcuffs to hang on to reporters with. Children sometimes react rather shyly to him, he said, but he likes to make them smile and forget their ills.

ONE HOSPITAL, St. James in Chicago Heights, said Thum is "better than medicine," when it comes to taking the pain away from a sick child. "They call me 'TLC' — tender loving care," he said. Other hospitals have claimed him as "their clown," he said.

Thum does radio and television spots, has performed at McCormick Place and recently gave the key to the City of Harvey to Gov. Daniel Walker. Soon he'll be visiting Dixon State Hospital, which he does several times a year. Also, Illinois Central Hospital wants to send him to an orphanage in Poland, he said.

"I'm looking for my own TV show," he said.

It takes Thum two hours to put on his clown face — white skin with a big red smile, bulbous red nose, blue-painted and glittered designs on his face and blue sideburns. "Can you guess how many hours a day I spend in this makeup?" he said. Sometimes it's most of the day. He always drives, in costume, to his performances.

"My costume's not frightening," he said. "I'm a happy clown with a happy face." He likes to make children smile, he said.

Man, 33, arrested for public indecency

A 33-year-old Palatine man Friday was charged with public indecency.

Jerry A. Bunday, 1073 W. Elm, was apprehended by Palatine police at 8 a.m. Friday in the parking lot of the Suburban National Bank in Palatine.

Police responded to a call from a bank secretary who said that Bunday exposed himself to her as she was leaving her car outside the bank.

Bunday is scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court Aug. 29.

Two administrators assume new duties

Two Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 administrators will have new responsibilities for the coming school year.

Dropping his former role as director of informational services, Paul W. Jung will assume responsibilities as an administrative assistant for planning, including land development and long-range planning. He will continue to be responsible for all personnel matters, as in the past.

Lorita S. Langley will take up the job of informational services director next fall in addition to her regular responsibilities as director of pupil personnel. She will publish the Official Grapevine and handle all other public relations areas.

Meeting date changed

The August meeting of the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education has been changed to 8 p.m., Aug. 7 in the E.S. Castor Administration Building, 505 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

The meeting originally was scheduled for Aug. 14.

Burglars, state agents trade gunfire

Gunfire was exchanged Friday afternoon in Arlington Heights between agents of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation and four men who had burglarized a house.

The four men were apparently still at large Sunday.

The incident occurred at 10:47 p.m. Friday when six agents from the IBI organized crime division began searching the area around Wilshire and Miner Street for the four men.

The four, believed to be professional burglars, escaped on foot from the area after they broke into the home of 42-year-old William G. Baron, 400 N. Windsor.

BUREAU OFFICIALS Sunday declined to discuss details of the incident or to confirm if the four have been found. A spokesman for the bureau said a news briefing on the matter would be released today.

However, Arlington Heights police said Sunday that the four, whose identity the IBI asked not be revealed, are still at large.

The chase began after the six agents began combing the area near Wilshire and Miner for the four men.

The four men had been followed by the agents through Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights apparently in anticipation of a residential burglary attempt, police said. The four had been riding in two Lincoln Continental automobiles with Illinois license plates, but the cars were impounded by the bureau after they were abandoned in the pursuit.

THE FOUR apparently broke into the Baron home just before the chase. Baron and his wife were away on vacation in Wisconsin. Two daughters, 13-year-old Leslie and 16-year-old Diane were also away at the time of the break-in. They found the house ransacked when they returned. They told police they found items stacked near the door of the house when they entered.

Police had no report on what, if any items may have been taken.

The four men fled the scene on foot, eluding Arlington Heights police and the IBI agents. An area-wide police alert for the four was then issued.

No one was reported injured in the shooting incident during the chase.

Higher taxes, costs mean more off-season uses for track

by KURT BAER

Higher taxes and a growing overhead mean additional off-season uses must be found for Arlington Park Race Track, according to a senior vice president of Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of the track.

"Our race tracks are large facilities and we can't afford to hold on to them if we're only going to use them 40 or 50 days out of the year," said Joseph Joyce, contacted by The Herald Friday in his New York office.

Joyce was at the center of a recent controversy in south suburban Homewood after he proposed a rock concert featuring Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young or Elvis Presley at Washington Park Race Track, also owned by Madison Square Garden.

PLANS FOR the concert, which Joyce guessed could have drawn 100,000 persons, were scratched after the musical groups could not be booked.

While there are no specific plans for a similar music fest at Arlington Park, it is likely something will be proposed in the future, Joyce says.

"It is a reasonable possibility that at some time down the road we'll use Arlington Park for a concert," he said. "We don't like to produce a lot of noise where we have horses stabled, though," he added.

It is Madison Square Garden's policy, according to Joyce, to notify municipalities of plans for special events at their facilities.

"We told the village board in Homewood that there was a possibility that we could get Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. They asked for an estimate of how many people might attend and I said at the outside 100,000, and then the rocket took off," he said.

HUNDREDS OF Homewood residents organized in opposition to the planned concert fearing the hordes of pot-smoking, free love-making teen-agers they associate with rock music. They packed the Homewood village hall last Tuesday to protest the concert only to be told by Joyce that the plan had been dropped.

"The tentative date we had with Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young would not come to fruition and then the Elvis thing fell apart.

"But this doesn't mean we wouldn't try to do something at some other time," Joyce said.

The concert planned for Washington Park was scheduled at a time when the race track is dormant — a condition that will prevail at Arlington Park after this year's racing ends Sept. 7.

In accord with Joyce's comment on the economic necessity of off-season uses for Arlington Park are the plans for a private housing at the track being drawn by the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development firm.

"We're still meeting with Madison Square Garden. I hope we can get back to the village's plat and subdivision committee before too long," Arthur Gingold, Richards Group president, said Friday.

ONE PRELIMINARY plan included several 20-story high-rise apartment buildings on the race track property north of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Gingold has declined to discuss details of the housing plan before it is presented to the plan commission's plat and subdivision committee.

"We're still working with it," he said. Appropriately enough, the Richards Group of Illinois is a subsidiary of Madison Square Garden Corp.

Sayles Cemetery condition a 'shock' to county official

A Cook County representative said he was shocked Friday by the negligent condition of the county-owned Sayles Cemetery in Palatine Township.

Robert Matthews, of the county management department, surveyed the pioneer cemetery, which is concealed by overgrown trees from Long Grove Road and Astor Avenue, where it is located. As he snapped pictures of the 1.15-acre site and glanced at headstones to catch dates, he agreed that the cemetery was "in worse condition than he thought," and that "the county and township should work together in restoring" the grounds.

Matthews was instructed "by his superiors," he said, to take a look at Sayles and Old Plum Grove Cemeteries, both county-owned. Avery V. Wolfum, chairman of the Palatine Township Cemetery Board, has been urging the county to restore the cemeteries, or turn their ownership to the township for restoration.

THE CEMETERY board presently is restoring Cady Cemetery, which is owned by the township, and intends to have the two county-owned pioneer cemeteries restored. The township however, has said that it does not want to pay for the restoration of a cemetery it does not own.

The county is willing to give a right of entry to the township to work on restoring the shambled cemetery. But it is questionable whether funds will be available for the county to join in or completely take charge of restoration, Matthews said.

"It's not that the county doesn't care about its property. I think that my being out here indicates that the county is at least a little interested in the restoration of this cemetery," Matthews said.

"The county's aware of this problem now, and I think that if the county has any pride, that it would see to it that this cemetery is restored," he said.

MATTHEWS WILL make a report of his findings and pictures of his visit to Sayles Cemetery to county officials. He has no idea when or in what manner the report on the county property will be acted on.

Matthews said that the one ready solution, which would be for the county to turn possession of the cemetery over to the township, is almost impossible.

The county was given possession of the Sayles Cemetery in the early 1800s under a law making it difficult to transfer the land deed, he said.

Since the township will not restore the cemetery unless it owns it, it seems as though the township and the county will have to work together if the cemetery is to be restored, Matthews said.

Wolfum and Matthews agreed that the property would require the clearing off of overgrown trees and thick shrubbery. Garbage and household rubble would have to be cleared off of the grounds, which also would have to be fenced in to keep vandals out. Eventually, grave-stones and markers would be reconstructed, and graves distinguishably marked.

IF GRASS CLIPPING DISPOSAL is a hassle for the average homeowner, the problem is tenfold for the lawn maintenance man. But George C. Fischer, who has a lawn maintenance company in Arlington Heights, has a solution much to the dismay of some Palatine residents. Fischer recycles grass clippings on a lot on Carter Street in unincorporated Palatine Township to form organic mulch. The ecological advantages of the recycling are disputed by some who complain it is an eyesore, stinks and breeds mosquitoes and rodents. A representative of the Environmental Protection Agency investigated the lot but found no health hazard or violation of the EPA since the lot is used only for temporary storage.

Abandoned Sunoco service station

Savings and loan considers site

The site of the abandoned Sunoco service station at East Frontage Road and Kirchhoff Road in Rolling Meadows is being considered as a possible location for the St. Paul Federal Savings and Loan Assn. city branch.

The site is being considered along with several others along the south side of Kirchhoff Road, Joseph Sculli, vice president of the savings and loan, confirmed Friday. The association is still considering locations in the Topps-National shopping center but no decision has yet been made on a definite site, Sculli said.

"I would imagine we're talking about a four-to-six-week process," Sculli said. He said officials of the association are currently negotiating for real estate on which to build the S & L's Rolling Meadows branch, which received charter approval from the state last week.

THE SUNOCO site was recently annexed to the city along with a number of other parcels and the Philippe subdivision at the Kirchhoff Road and Ill. Rte. 53 intersection. The service station, which has been abandoned for a number of months, had been a sore spot with the city since zoning for the station was approved by Cook County over the city's objections several years ago.

St. Paul officials and city officials toured the city's Kirchhoff Road business district Friday reviewing possible locations for the S & L branch. Both the Sunoco site and the Topps shopping center site are commercially zoned and could accommodate the depository branch.

The association may have to seek zoning variations, however, to allow free standing signs and drive-up window banking booths.

"If we decide on one of the locations, we would make application to the city as soon as possible for a special zoning commission to be formed," Sculli said.

THE TOPPS SHOPPING center had been originally eyed for the location of the $475 million Chicago-based association's city branch. Three locations in the shopping center, one immediately east of the Union 76 service station, one in the middle of the shopping center parking lot along Kirchhoff Road and the third on the east end of the parking lot, had been offered to city officials for consideration.

City officials had indicated they would prefer the east end location to avoid traffic congestion at the Kirchhoff Road-Meadow Drive intersection.

"The Topps lot is still a possibility," Sculli said Friday. He added the association is still hopeful it can open at least a temporary facility in the city before the end of the year.

"We still have the outside hope that we will," he said. He said as soon as a decision is made on a permanent location for the S & L the association will probably

Both the Sunoco and the Topps sites comply with the terms of the association's petition to the state requesting a Rolling Meadows charter for a site on the south side of Kirchhoff Road between Ill. Rte. 53 and Meadow Drive, Sculli said.

The St. Paul facility would be the first savings and loan association in the city. The Bank of Rolling Meadows now is the only depository in the city, with the Plum Grove Bank on Algonquin and Wilke roads scheduled to open in August.

Apartment defects may be fixed soon

Structural defects cited in a Rolling Meadows lawsuit against developers of the Meadow Trace Apartments may be repaired within the next two weeks, James Fadim, attorney for the developers said Friday.

The city filed charges in Circuit Court in January against Kassaba Development Inc., charging them with violations of the city building code in the complex at Ill. Rte. 53 and Algonquin Road.

Attorneys for the city have said charges may be dropped against the developers if the alleged violations are corrected before the case comes to trial.

No trial date has been set.

Joseph Ladd, attorney for the city, said he, Fadim, and city officials will examine the repairs before charges will be dropped.

Two administrators assume new duties

Two Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 administrators will have new responsibilities for the coming school year.

Dropping his former role as director of informational services, Paul W. Jung will assume responsibilities as an administrative assistant for planning, including land development and long-range planning. He will continue to be responsible for all personnel matters, as in the past.

Lorita S. Langley will take up the job of informational services director next fall in addition to her regular responsibilities as director of pupil personnel. She will publish the Official Grapevine and handle all other public relations areas.

Meeting date changed

The August meeting of the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education has been changed to 8 p.m., Aug. 7 in the ES-Castor Administration Building, 503 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

The meeting originally was scheduled for Aug. 14.

Subdivision quits rural park district

The Thunderbird Estates subdivision is expected to be disannexed from the Palatine Rural Park District at a rural park district meeting today.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. at the Prince of Peace Church, 1190 N. Hicks Rd., Palatine.

Park board members informally voted in favor of disannexation at a meeting last month. The Thunderbird Estate's residents' petition for disannexation has been on file for 30 days with the park district attorney as required by law.

Thunderbird residents intend to join the Barrington Park District as soon as the district passes an ordinance annexing the Thunderbird area, which it is expected to do at its next meeting.

EDWIN BARTZ, rural park district commissioner and Thunderbird Estates resident who headed the petition, said the residents have received support and acceptance for annexation from the Barrington Park District.

Thunderbird Estates residents have Barrington mailing addresses, and use the Barrington schools and fire department services. Most of the residents use nearby Barrington Park District facilities under a nonresidential fee.

The petitioning residents feel isolated from the rural park district because they are located in the district's northwest area bounded by Northwest Highway, Hillside Avenue and Elm Road, Bartz said.

THUNDERBIRD ESTATES residents filed a petition for disannexation from the rural park district more than one year ago. The petition required revision by law to include verification that there was no bonded indebtedness, special assessment or unpaid real estate taxes for the area when the disannexation occurs.

The rural park district attorney, Roger Bjorvik, also is expected to make a report on the $350,000 general obligation bonds that were issued at the district's June meeting.

A general discussion of a possible 1975 merger with the Palatine Park District also is expected to take place at tonight's meeting.

Palatine trustees to hear rejected apartment plans

A proposal for a huge housing development and shopping center near the Old Madrid apartment building has been rejected by the Palatine Zoning Board of Appeals, and will be brought before the village board tonight.

The zoning board, in a 4-1 decision with one member abstaining, Thursday voted to reject plans for nine apartment buildings, an 18-acre shopping center, a 10-acre recreation and commercial development and a 4-acre office and commercial development.

Howard Sellergren, owner and developer, is seeking to build the new complex in place of three 11-story apartment buildings already approved by the village and a 26-acre commercial development.

The development is planned for 66 acres at Northwest Highway and Hicks Road.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS said the proposal will probably be sent to the village board's planning, building and zoning committee for further study Monday.

Among a list of reasons for rejecting the proposal, zoning board members said Sellergren's plan provides "too much flexibility" for the developer, and charged Sellergren with not providing information requested by the board.

The proposal, board members said, did not include maximum height limitations for buildings, and they complained about a provision which would allow builders to move buildings slightly away from where specifications now read.

The provision would allow builders to move the buildings as long as no more than 10 per cent of the building is moved outside of its proposed location.

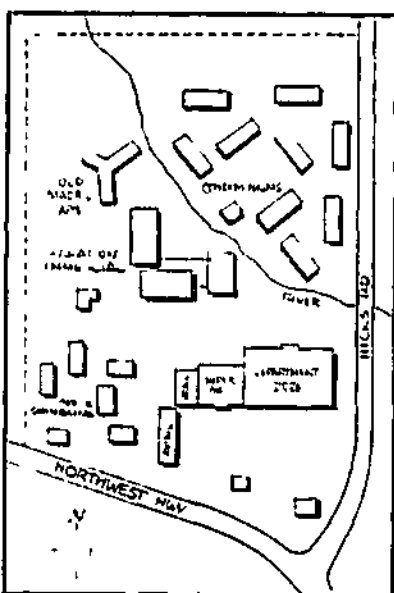

"I think the petitioner has failed to provide a lot of information asked of him by this board," said Philip Chouinard, a board member. "Instead, they've tried to tell us the information isn't necessary."

DAVID KULL, chairman of the zoning board, said the developer gave the board "no assurance the buildings are going to be placed where he says they are going to be."

Chouinard also criticized the plan for being "full of holes."

John Duffy, Sellergren's attorney, said he was "gravely disappointed" with the zoning board's decision.

"The board has given us a fair hearing, but we're very disappointed with the results," Duffy said. "This will have a significant effect on the village board. It will seriously consider this recommendation.

Stewart Bossel, proposed developer of the 18-acre commercial site, told the board that he and Sellergren have made "sincere, honest, and diligent efforts to answer questions," but added, "some of your requests have been totally unrealistic."

PALATINE VILLAGE Pres. Wendell Jones said Friday, that if the village board shares the same concerns of the zoning board, it too might deny Sellergren's request.

He said members of the boards may be taking a "gamble," hoping that Sellergren will not go ahead with original plans for three 11-story buildings.

Jones said some members of both boards may be hoping Sellergren will come back with a more "amicable proposal."

Palatine Trustee James Shaw said Friday he would be inclined to "rely on the zoning board's decision and agree with it."

Thum likes to have children assist him in his act, which includes a few simple magic tricks.

Thum invited a little boy with an ear-to-ear grin help him make "magic popcorn" Thursday at Alexian Brothers. Thum sprinkled "magic corn" and "magic salt" in a "magic pan," and instructed his assistant to hit the pan with a magic wand.

"If you keep hitting like that you're going to make a chicken fly out," he warned his rather enthusiastic helper.

Thum visits hospitals with cartons full of surprises — get-well cards, bubble gum, tootsie pops and magazines, props for magic tricks and handcuffs to hang on to reporters with. Children sometimes react rather shyly to him, he said, but he likes to make them smile and forget their ills.

ONE HOSPITAL, St. James in Chicago Heights, said Thum is "better than medicine," when it comes to taking the pain away from a sick child. "They call me 'TLC' — tender loving care," he said. Other hospitals have claimed him as "their clown," he said.

Thum does radio and television spots, has performed at McCormick Place and recently gave the key to the City of Harvey to Gov. Daniel Walker. Soon he'll be visiting Dixon State Hospital, which he does several times a year. Also, Illinois Central Hospital wants to send him to an orphanage in Poland, he said.

"I'm looking for my own TV show," he said.

It takes Thum two hours to put on his clown face — white skin with a big red smile, bulbous red nose, blue-painted and glittered designs on his face and blue sideburns. "Can you guess how many hours a day I spend in this makeup?" he said. Sometimes it's most of the day. He always drives, in costume, to his performances.

"My costume's not frightening," he said. "I'm a happy clown with a happy face." He likes to make children smile, he said.

"It's the most beautiful thing in the world to give children something to be happy about," Thum said. "I wouldn't give this up for a million dollars — and believe me, I've had offers."

Burglars, state agents trade gunfire

Gunfire was exchanged Friday afternoon in Arlington Heights between agents of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation and four men who had burglarized a house.

The four men were apparently still at large Sunday.

The incident occurred at 10:47 p.m. Friday when six agents from the FBI organized crime division began searching the area around Wilshire and Miner Street for the four men.

The four, believed to be professional burglars, escaped on foot from the area after they broke into the home of 42-year-old William G. Baron, 400 N. Windsor.

BUREAU OFFICIALS Sunday declined to discuss details of the incident or to confirm if the four have been found. A spokesman for the bureau said a news briefing on the matter would be released today.

However, Arlington Heights police said Sunday that the four, whose identity the FBI asked not be revealed, are still at large.

The chase began after the six agents began combing the area near Wilshire and Miner for the four men.

The four men had been followed by the agents through Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights apparently in anticipation of a residential burglary attempt, police said. The four had been riding in two Lincoln Continental automobiles with Illinois license plates, but the cars were impounded by the bureau after they were abandoned in the pursuit.

THE FOUR apparently broke into the Baron home just before the chase. Baron and his wife were away on vacation in Wisconsin. Two daughters, 13-year-old Leslie and 16-year-old Diane were also away at the time of the break-in. They found the house ransacked when they returned. They told police they found items stacked near the door of the house when they entered.

Police had no report on what, if any items may have been taken.

The four men fled the scene on foot, eluding Arlington Heights police and the FBI agents. An area-wide police alert for the four was then issued.

No one was reported injured in the shooting incident during the chase.

Store to host week of games, contests

Contests, games and special booths will be featured this week at the Rolling Meadows Treasury store during a special sales week.

The theme of the event Wednesday through Saturday will be the 1950s. Games will be held in the store and in the store parking lot and special booths including a photo booth and kissing booth. A dance contest also will be held as well as a cracker-eating contest and hula hoop contest.

The store is located at Algonquin and Golf roads.

Donations will go to local charities.

State litter law weighed by township

The Palatine Township Board of Auditors today is expected to further discuss operating under the state Refuse Collection Act in order to control the frequent open space littering in the township.

The board will meet at 8 p.m. at the township hall, 37 N. Plum Grove Rd., Palatine.

An attorney from the Illinois Attorney General's Office suggested at a recent township meeting that the board work under the statute instead of passing its own ordinance. Board members believe the township needs more power to prosecute and fine persons who litter public or private property, or landowners who allow dumping on their property without a state license.

General discussion also is scheduled to take place on the authorization of U.S. revenue-sharing funds for Shelter Inc., Crossroads Clinic, and the Youth Services Bureau for a regional youth counseling program.

'Seek a settlement...'

That's the message homeowners are giving to village concerning K&B lawsuit

by NANCY COWGER

Most homeowners in Barrington Square believe Hoffman Estates should opt for an out-of-court settlement in the lawsuits pending between the village and the company, Kaufman and Broad Inc., that built their homes.

The homeowners feel little or no animosity toward the $100,000 the village could gain if settlement is approved on terms thus far made public. As one resident said, "It wasn't just Barrington Square that got ripped off. The whole city got ripped off."

The suits stem from events that happened nearly six years ago, when K&B bribed six village officials for speedy, no-questions-asked zoning for the Barrington Square development. The ex-officials were convicted last winter in the bribery scheme, and this June village board members voted to withhold building permits for late phases in the development, and restudy zoning on undeveloped land with an eye to zoning changes.

K&B FILED SUIT against the village, seeking immediate issuance of the permits and approval of final plans for the still undeveloped land with no zoning adjustments. In response, the village authorized, but has not yet filed, a suit against K&B to recover ill-gotten profits the company derived as a result of the bribes.

Since then, settlement negotiations have been under way. Although attorneys have refused to outline progress in their talks, some trustees broke the secrecy and disclosed the village request of $100,000 in cash, 12.5 acres of park land at Barrington Square and $250,000 of improvements to Poplar Creek, which traverses the K&B property.

The alternative to settlement is a court battle to establish a new legal maxim — persons who pay or receive bribes can face more than criminal punishment. If caught, they can face civil fines so steep as to make the risk connected with bribery one of financial ruin.

Since that maxim is not law now, there is no assurance the village would win its suit. The $15,000 allocated to pay legal costs could be thrown away, or it could pay a dividend in honest government through fear of the consequences.

Most Barrington Square residents interviewed think the village would be smart to take the settlement, because they "don't believe they would get any more out of it" by following through on the suit. Mrs. Chester Dunn believes the homeowners association, which has filed a suit of its own, should press its complaint, and not accept a settlement if one is offered.

ALTHOUGH THE BRIBES, and federal indictments and convictions that revealed them, grew out of construction of Barrington Square, the residents do not feel possessive about any compensation the village may derive, either from settlement or suit. Raymond Singer, strongly critical of the builder, believes the bribery hurt many more people than the purchasers at Barrington Square, who may have paid the bribe cost in their home prices.

But Singer does not believe the lawsuits and potential settlement will make K&B suffer enough for what the company did.

"I don't think we should cripple them. But we should break their arms a couple of times," he said.

Singer expressed no surprise that bribes changed hands. "It's very common. You've got it everywhere now," he said. For the village to fight in court for a precedent setting ruling, accepting no less than the new legal principle that could result, would be a realistic goal, he said.

Mrs. James Gintzler also would push for a court battle, if the village asked her advice. "After dealing with K&B, I think it (the village) should get all it can. It should go to court," she said. Mrs. Gintzler called K&B "highway robbers," and said she has "no use for people who are not honest." She hates the thought "I paid more for my house than it is worth because someone got paid off and I paid the pay off," she said.

K&B SHOULD BE trimmed in court as a warning, believes Mrs. Gintzler, who views the firm's conduct as a case of "a bit outfit that felt it could throw its weight around — money talked for them."

A settlement appeals to Mrs. Jean Bliss, who believes "all builders are corrupt" and is glad to see people care enough to fight back against corruption. But the village "might gain less, going to court," and she particularly wants to see the park district receive open land. She agrees with Singer's assessment that "the parks we do have, you could put on a postage stamp."

Mrs. Bliss is the only resident interviewed who noted a specific use for cash from a settlement, and said it should be spent solely in Barrington Square. "The village should spend the money here, on our roads — that's the most pressing thing," she said. The roads are starting to deteriorate, and K&B made no provisions for anyone to maintain them, not even telling the homeowners to prepare for the cost, she said.

Alternate school plans not set

Alternate plans for students who should be attending Einstein Elementary School have not been established, said Milton Derr, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 associate superintendent.

Einstein, in Hanover Park, is scheduled to open Aug. 29, the first day of school. However, because construction has been delayed by Ranke-Cimo and Associates, contractor for the project, the building may not be completed by that date.

The Board of Education Thursday terminated Ranke-Cimo's contract because the company had run into financial difficulties that delayed the completion of the building. Originally, the building, at 111 Laurie Ln., was scheduled to be finished in December, 1973.

ABOUT 100 STUDENTS will need to be placed in other schools if the building is not completed by Aug. 29. This includes physically handicapped students scheduled for the special education courses that will be offered at Einstein.

The major problem, said Derr, is subcontractors have refused to complete their construction until they receive payment for the work already done and a guarantee to receive payment for the remainder of the work.

The district had been paying Ranke-Cimo, who in turn was to pay the subcontractors. Often Ranke-Cimo either did not pay subcontractors or paid the subcontractors with checks that bounced.

TOTAL CONSTRUCTION costs for the building are $818,886. To date, $693,733 has been paid by the district. Thursday night the board withheld approval for payment of an additional $26,815 until settlement of the terminated contract is reached.

Most of the construction work for Einstein is completed said Derr. "It could be ready in a matter of days," he said. "We are still highly hopeful that the building will be completed by someone by that date."

The roof was completed this week and the building is now watertight, he said. "That's one of the few things that is completely done."

Ranke-Cimo received notice from the district June 20 that the contract would be terminated if work was not completed by July 10, the revised completion date promised by a company representative.

SINCE THAT DATE little has been done on the building, said S. Guy Fishman, architect for the school.

With the termination of the contract, the bonding company for the project, Travelers Insurance Co., will step in and decide how to complete the job.

The district also sent notice that it will seek collection of $23,000 of liquidated damages at $100 a day for the 230 days the building was past the anticipated completion date.

Another problem in the construction of Einstein has been vandalism, Derr said. The district estimated that about $10,000 worth of vandalism occurred since construction started.

Barrington Square 'not so great' now

by NANCY COWGER

The longer people live in Barrington Square, the less they seem to like it.

The earliest residents of the subdivision feel they were sold a bill of goods in the predictions of spacious living, scenic views and unfettered play areas for their children. For newly arrived occupants, it's a case of "what you saw is what you got."

"The sales force would tell you anything. They led you to believe things that just weren't true," recalled Joe Smith, who points to models blocking what was touted as unobstructed vision all the way to the Governors Club, recreation hall for the complex.

"We just had this great picture of what this place would be," said Mrs. James Gintzler. "And now, like so many of our neighbors, we just can't wait to leave."

Sailing class registration remains open

Registration still is being taken for the basic sailing class to be offered by Hoffman Estates Park District starting July 29.

Cost of the class is $30 for residents and $35 for nonresidents. The program includes two dry land sessions totaling four hours of class work and 12 hours of semi-private instruction, scheduled at the convenience of students at Highpoint Lake. A sailboat is provided. The class is limited to 21 students.

Later this summer class instructor Pat Kellogg will organize the first annual summer regatta at Highpoint Lake for all sailboats, from dinghies to 15-foot sloop-rigged centerboards. The park district will be the sponsor.

Persons wishing to register for the course may telephone Kellogg at 885-9449, or Al Binder, park district director, at 885-7500.

Youths arrested for buying liquor

Schaumburg police charged two youths with liquor law violations Saturday evening after Patrolman Mike Egan observed them leaving Walgreen's in Hoffman Estates with a bag of beer bottles.

Rudolph Rudolph Casares, 17, 162 Newark, Hoffman Estates, was charged with unlawful possession of fraudulent identification and of liquor. Jeffrey Ackermann, 18, of 356 Washington, Hoffman Estates, was charged with unlawful possession of liquor. Both are to appear in the Schaumburg branch of Circuit Court, at 1:30 p.m. Aug. 14.

Egan stopped the auto which the two youths were riding at Ill. Rte. 58 and Apple Street as they left the shopping center. Police said Casares had bought the beer with a borrowed drivers license as identification.

Power concerns trustees in considering manager

Although Schaumburg trustees spoke favorably Saturday of a proposal to initiate a manager system of government in the village, they noted concern over possible erosion of their own powers and those of the village clerk.

Village Atty. Jack Siegel explained the functions of a village manager in a special coffee with the Council session after he presented the trustees, Pres. Robert O. Atcher and Clerk Sandy Carsello with copies of an ordinance he said was lifted from state statutes.

The manager would have responsibility and authority over all departments and their day to day functions, except police and fire departments, Siegel said. He would handle hirings and firings of personnel, including chiefs in all but those two departments. He would carry out policy set by the president and trustees, including spending funds appropriated and budgeted, but could not impound budgeted funds, Siegel said.

WHILE THE manager also would control employment and procedures of the village collector, he would not have any authority over the village clerk or the clerk's employees.

By ordinance, Carsello also serves as collector, and it was suggested there could be overlapping responsibilities which might cause friction between a clerk-collector and a manager.

The village board may decide to adopt the manager system and appoint a manager at any time. But a joint measure, to make the village presidency a part-time position rather than full-time, as it now is, will not become effective until May 1, when Atcher expects to retire. Atcher said Saturday he will not be eligible for a pension from the Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund until he serves the last day of his current term. If his status was changed to part-time official before then, his pension would be reduced, he said, adding that statute bars the mid-term changing of a salary for an elected official.

ATCHER SAID Saturday the need is declining for a full-time mayor to serve in a promotion or public relations capacity representing the village. Most land in the village either is developed or is owned by persons with the ability to develop the land in a desirable fashion, he said.

Siegel appeared to allay trustees' fears about a manager overstepping his powers. He pointed out the manager serves at the pleasure of the board, and can be fired if his conduct is not satisfactory. And even though the manager, an appointed and not an elected official, will be responsible for serving residents' needs, elected officials still must be responsive to the public in setting the policy under which the manager will operate, Siegel said.

Both Siegel and Atcher cautioned the trustees not to set policy severely restricting the manager's powers, lest they undermine his ability to meet his responsibilities.

RAIN SPATTERS the surface of Highpoint Lake as beginning sailing students experience their first "small-boat-warning" weather during a practice run. New students still may sign for classes, which begin July 29.

Two charged with failure to yield

Two persons were charged with failure to yield the right of way while turning left after two separate accidents resulting in apparently minor injuries Friday in Hoffman Estates.

Margaret E. Donehey, 3711 Dove St., Rolling Meadows, was charged after a collision at Ill. Rte. 72 and Roselle Road between her car and autos driven by Agostino Fiasche, 2822 N. 74th St., Elmwood Park, and Dennis Rudofski, 12337 S. Loomis, Chicago, police said. She is to answer the charge Oct. 4 in Hoffman Estates branch at Circuit Court. Fiasche was taken to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights. Details of his injuries were not available.

Police said Jack Green, 800 Bode Rd., Hoffman Estates, also was charged after his auto collided with a motorcycle driven by Lance S. Patel, 22, of 414 Aspen Ln., Hoffman Estates. The accident occurred at Ill. Rte. 72 and Apple Street. Patel was taken to Northwest Community Hospital. Green is to answer the charge Sept. 13 in Hoffman Estates branch of Circuit Court.

Higher taxes, costs mean more off-season uses for track

by KURT BAER

Higher taxes and a growing overhead mean additional off-season uses must be found for Arlington Park Race Track, according to a senior vice president of Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of the track.

"Our race tracks are large facilities and we can't afford to hold on to them if we're only going to use them 80 or 90 days out of the year," said Joseph Joyce, contacted by The Herald Friday in his New York office.

Joyce was at the center of a recent controversy in south suburban Homewood after he proposed a rock concert featuring Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young or Elvis Presley at Washington Park Race Track, also owned by Madison Square Garden.

PLANS FOR the concert, which Joyce guessed could have drawn 100,000 persons, were scratched after the musical groups could not be booked.

While there are no specific plans for a similar music fest at Arlington Park, it is likely something will be proposed in the future, Joyce says.

"It is a reasonable possibility that at some time down the road we'll use Arlington Park for a concert," he said. "We don't like to produce a lot of noise where we have horses stabled, though," he added.

It is Madison Square Garden's policy, according to Joyce, to notify municipalities of plans for special events at their facilities.

"We told the village board in Homewood that there was a possibility that we could get Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. They asked for an estimate of how many people might attend and I said at the outside 100,000, and then the rocket took off," he said.

HUNDREDS OF Homewood residents organized in opposition to the planned concert fearing the hordes of pot-smoking, free love-making teen-agers they associate with rock music. They packed the Homewood village hall last Tuesday to protest the concert only to be told by Joyce that the plan had been dropped.

"The tentative date we had with Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young would not come to fruition and then the Elvis thing fell apart."

"But this doesn't mean we wouldn't try to do something at some other time," Joyce said.

The concert planned for Washington Park was scheduled at a time when the race track is dormant — a condition that will prevail at Arlington Park after this year's racing ends Sept. 7.

In accord with Joyce's comment on the economic necessity of off-season uses for Arlington Park are the plans for a private housing at the track being drawn by the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development firm.

"We're still meeting with Madison Square Garden. I hope we can get back to the village's plat and subdivision committee before too long," Arthur Gingold, Richards Group president, said Friday.

ONE PRELIMINARY plan included several 20-story high-rise apartment buildings on the race track property north of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Gingold has declined to discuss details of the housing plan before it is presented to the plan commission's plat and subdivision committee.

"We're still working with it," he said.

Appropriately enough, the Richards Group of Illinois is a subsidiary of Madison Square Garden Corp.

Cost of milk, hot lunches to go up

Lunch costs will increase in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 next year. Hot lunches at the junior high schools will cost 60 cents each, an increase of 5 cents.

Milk also will increase to 28 cents for five-carton coupons at junior high schools and 33 cents for five-carton coupons at elementary schools. Milk cost 5 cents a carton last year.

The increased hot-lunch cost should prevent the program from needing subsidies if the same number of lunches are sold, said Arlene Czajkowski, board member. She said Mass Feeding Corp., that supplies the hot lunches has informed the district the price of lunches will increase from 48.8 cents to 52 cents starting Oct. 1. The remaining 8 cents covers administrative costs.

Hot lunches were discontinued in the elementary schools by board action in June.

The milk increase was necessitated by the increase for milk from Modern Dairy that was approved by the board. Modern Dairy increased the cost of milk to the district from 6.7 cents to 8.5 cents a carton.

Because the district offers a hot-lunch program in the junior high schools, the district received federal subsidy of 3 cents a carton at the junior highs while it only receives 2 cents a carton at the elementary schools.

Budget ready for public

The tentative budget for the 1974-75 school year is available to the public at the business office of the Administration Building, 804 W. Bode Rd., Schaumburg.

The budget anticipates a total revenue of $18,608,330 and total expenditures of $17,912,325 for a surplus of $696,025. This compares with last year's anticipated revenue of $15,208,150, expenditure of $15,198,400 for a surplus of $14,750.

The public hearing on the budget will be held Sept. 5 at 8 p.m. at Helen Keller Junior High School, 820 W. Bode Rd., Schaumburg.

Observatory deck OK'd

A deck adjacent to the observatory at Eisenhower Junior High School was approved for construction by the Board of Education.

Construction costs were limited to $2,400.

The Eisenhower observatory with its celetron telescope was completed this year for public use. A deck was requested for better access to the observatory.

The observatory at 800 W. Hassell Rd., Hoffman Estates, is open to the public Friday from 9 to 10 p.m.

IT'S NOT ALWAYS EASY to bring a smile to a sick child's face, but Jack Thum Thee Clown tries, with jokes, candy, magazines and a big red smile. Kim Haefe of Schaumburg is one child Jack tried to cheer up when he visited the pediatrics wing of Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

'Better than medicine'

Jack Thum Thee Clown loves children, and the feeling happens to be mutual

by FRAN SLIMMER

Jack Thum's been clowning around the state for the past 15 years, and vows to do it the rest of his life.

He dons his colorful baggy suit, big red nose, curly wig and big flipper-like shoes seven days a week, to entertain at parties, promotions and picnics. He also makes volunteer visits to children in hospitals and orphanages twice a week, including one to the Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

"Once I get that costume on, time doesn't matter," Thum said. He may be hired for three hours, he said, but he'll stay around as long as he gets children to laugh.

"We all need a little laughter," he said. "There's so much grief in the world."

THUM LOVES children, and while he has none of his own, he has raised 16 foster children. "I haven't had a Christmas without a child with me," Thum said.

"A child is a child to me," he said, whether the child's healthy, sick or handicapped. "As long as he has a smile and feels wanted, he's the same to me. They're all God's children — and I'm the biggest one."

Thum remembers when he was a child who spent two years in a hospital, paralyzed with rheumatic fever. He recalls how he felt when someone came in to cheer him up. Now he visits children confined in hospitals and orphanages. "I, Jack Thum Thee Clown, will go to them and make them happy."

Thum said he was "gifted" with the talent to be a clown. He had been a salesman and was always joking around before he became Jack Thum Thee Clown.

"I don't think there's another clown in the business who goes by his real name," he said.

HE USES A big rubber thumb as a prop in his act. "I ask the kids what they would call me if I didn't have my thumb," he said. "They always say 'Fingers.'"

Thum likes to have children assist him in his act, which includes a few simple magic tricks.

Thum invited a little boy with an ear-to-ear grin help him make "magic popcorn" Thursday at Alexian Brothers. Thum sprinkled "magic corn" and "magic salt" in a "magic pan," and instructed his assistant to hit the pan with a magic wand.

"If you keep hitting like that you're going to make a chicken fly out," he warned his rather enthusiastic helper.

Thum visits hospitals with cartons full of surprises — got-well cards, bubble gum, tootsie pops and magazines, props for magic tricks and handkerchiefs to hang on to reporters with. Children sometimes react rather shyly to him, he said, but he likes to make them smile and forget their ills.

ONE HOSPITAL, St. James in Chicago Heights, said Thum is "better than medicine," when it comes to taking the pain away from a sick child. "They call me 'TLC' — tender loving care," he said. Other hospitals have claimed him as "their clown," he said.

Thum does radio and television spots, has performed at McCormick Place and recently gave the key to the City of Harvey to Gov. Daniel Walker. Soon he'll be visiting Dixon State Hospital, which he does several times a year. Also, Illinois Central Hospital wants to send him to an orphanage in Poland, he said.

"I'm looking for my own TV show," he said.

It takes Thum two hours to put on his clown face — white skin with a big red smile, bulbous red nose, blue-painted and glittered designs on his face and blue sideburns. "Can you guess how many hours a day I spend in this makeup?" he said. Sometimes it's most of the day. He always drives, in costume, to his performances.

"My costume's not frightening," he said. "I'm a happy clown with a happy face." He likes to make children smile, he said.

Barrington Square losing its glitter

her neighborhood, she came on strong. "It's not like a residential community — it's like a ghetto," she said. And the builder, Kaufman and Broad Inc., "went crazy with the land." The number of homes is at the root of the problem, she said, adding, "I've been pleased with the way they built my house. Qualitywise, we've had a good home."

She looked around at land that was "supposed to be a park, and now it's houses," and said the whole development "looks like a real tenement sort of place, the way it's just thrown up."

Newer residents, like Mrs. Jean Bliss, knew just what they were buying when they put down their money, and find the housing layout "fairly good." She compares the section where she lives, a matured part of the development, with new model areas, and finds the models "so cramped looking."

It all depends on what you were expecting, said others who have lived in the project for only a few months.

BUT EVEN THE short-termers have noticed a difference, one that may erase the "tenement like" wrinkles some residents point out. Since February, the Barrington Square Homeowners Assn. has really been what its name says — an association of people that live in the subdivision.

Until then, the seven-member association board had two residents and five corporate officials of Kaufman and Broad. That stemmed from its legal charter, giving the builder three votes for every home it still owned, and the purchaser one vote per unit. When enough homes had been sold, the two resident members of the board organized a proxy fight and forced the resignations of the five company men. Since then, dues have gone up from $23 to $26 per month, but service has improved.

"Once the homeowners took over, the grass got up to snuff, and the snow removal has been good," said Smith. Singer points around with pride at the results of an association doing a "fantastic job."

Since Kaufman and Broad is out of the association, "it's a lot better," said Mrs. Gintzler. "K&B used the association for its own ends," keeping down the dues so remaining units would sell faster. Maintenance suffered then.

IF KAUFMAN AND Broad still ran the association, another dweller said, the association wouldn't be suing the builder today. And not one resident interviewed questioned the wisdom of the suit.

Mrs. Shirley Gibbons, one of the first two homeowners on the association board, tells how the money is spent. With 550 families, the association receives about $14,000 per month, she said. Last year $17,000 was spent just to pay taxes on the Governors Club recreation center — and taxes on other common property had to be paid too. The club house roof leaks, and the association is renovating the building in hopes it will earn its keep in rental for wedding receptions and parties. The association has a full-time maintenance man year-round, and a six-man landscaping crew for summer. Every resident's grass gets mowed once a week, and each house is to be painted every two years, if the budget will stand it. This summer the painting crew has five men.

Before, said Mrs. Gibbons, maintenance was handled through a $1,000-per-month contract with a management firm, and a director was on the premises only two days per week.

"Nothing was getting done. We were spending the most money we could and nothing was satisfactory."

Mrs. Gibbons' goal for the association is to "get into a financial position where we can do more things for the homeowners."

Woman's club meeting

A coffee for prospective new members to the Schaumburg Woman's Club will be held Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. James Jiracek, 31 S. Salem Dr., Schaumburg.

Club members will be present to answer questions about the club. For information contact Mrs. Jiracek at 894-9353 or Mrs. D. Nunn at 894-3748.

Tickets for The Schaumburg Lions Club's Aug. 19 Carson and Barnes Flying Wild Animal Circus at Atcher Park, 730 S. Springguth Rd., are on sale.

Ticket centers have been established at the Buggy Whip Liquor Store, Weathersfield Commons Shopping Center, Schaumburg and Springguth roads, F-B-K Realtors, Schaumburg and Roselle roads, and Maitre d' Restaurant, 111 E. Higgins Rd., Elk Grove Village, or may be purchased from any Lions Club member, a spokesman said.

Lions Club members will also sell tickets the next few weekends at Woodfield Common Shopping Center, Golf and Mencham roads, Weathersfield Commons, Tradewinds, Shopping Center, Hanover Park and Roselle State Bank and Suburban Bank of Hoffman Estates.

Club members are urging advance ticket sales since Lions will receive a higher percentage of profits from tickets sold before the performance.

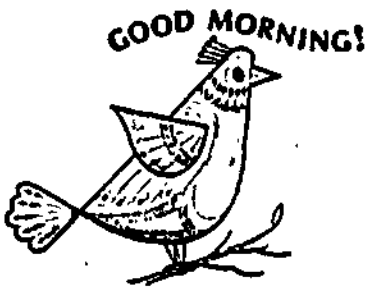

More information on ticket sales may be obtained by calling 529-7269, 529-2270 or 329-2631.

Splash party Friday

A junior high school splash party Friday night at Atcher pool will be sponsored by the Schaumburg Park District youth entertainment service.

A group named Splash will provide music at the pool at 730 Springguth Rd. The party will be from 8 to 10 p.m. There will be a $1 charge at the door.

Other entertainment will include water contests and games of basketball and volleyball.

'Less than $100,000' apart

Teichert says village close to purchase of library site

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert predicted Friday that arrangements will be completed this month for the village to purchase the Central School property for a new public library.

Teichert made the observation as village officials and owners of the school, at Main Street and Central Road, prepared to return to the bargaining table, reportedly "less than $100,000" apart in their negotiations.

"I don't think we're far apart at all," Teichert said. "I feel confident we'll resolve this thing without pursuing condemnation proceedings, which have already been initiated by the village."

Neither Alexander Magnus, owner of the property, nor Roy Gottlieb of Kenroy Inc., his broker, was available for comment Friday.

THE VILLAGE has been attempting to obtain the 2.6-acre site to turn over to the Mount Prospect Public Library Board of Directors for a new facility.

The village board has authorized an offer of $625,000 for both the property and the abandoned building, and while Teichert would not disclose the counter offer, he indicated the two sides were within $100,000 of accord.

"It will take a little more talking and I think we can each give a little," he said. The mayor said the village's filing suit to condemn the Central School property June 21 had a two-fold purpose: Hastening the possibility of an out-of-court settlement, and, failing that, resolving the matter in the Circuit Court. If attempts at a negotiated settlement fall through, a Circuit Court judge would determine whether there is sufficient public need to obtain the property, and if so, what the price should be.

THE LIBRARY board decided on the site, and the village board concurred in the decision, but an ad hoc committee studying downtown redevelopment later advised against it, saying the property could be put to better use as a commercial development.

Current plans call for the village to issue general obligation bonds to finance the $3.2 million project — buying the property, tearing down the present structure and erecting a two-story building. The cost breaks down to about $16 per year for 14 years in additional taxes per $10,000 equalized assessed valuation.

The library board is aiming for a June 1, 1976, occupancy.

Motorist apprehended with two licenses

The stop was routine — the man allegedly had gone through a red light — until the Mount Prospect policeman found two valid driver's licenses on the arrested.

Thus, Raymond G. Walton, 59, of 11 Lynbrook Dr., Prospect Heights, was charged with disobeying a red light and having false affidavits (the two licenses). Walton told police he lost the first license, wrote for a replacement and then found the original license.

Walton was arrested at 7:45 a.m. Thursday at the intersection of Central Road and Main Street. He is to appear Aug. 28 in the Mount Prospect branch of Circuit Court.

Four men will be hired

Fire eligibility list to be posted this week

A tentative eligibility list for the Mount Prospect Fire Dept. will be posted this week.

Of the 27 men on the list, four will be hired to bring the fire department up to its full strength of 53 men.

Starting with this list, all future police and fire lists will be tentative. Each candidate will have to undergo a medical check, polygraph test and background check before he can be hired.

According to the fire and police commission, the new method of handling lists should save time and money. The tests, particularly the polygraph, are expensive, said Joseph Grittani, commission chairman. Also, if all the men on the list are given the tests but the bottom man is not hired for 12 months, he has to take a second physical.

Only the top four men on the fire list will be given the three final tests, unless one of the four fails, Grittani said. If the four pass, the fifth man on the list will not be tested until another man is needed by the fire department.

Grittani said his committee will meet with Chief Ralph J. Doney of the police department soon to determine whether the next testing will be for new policemen or a promotional exam within the department. Doney wants both exams eventually, Grittani said.

Where were the Keystone Cops?

by TOM VON MALDER

An admirer of Mack Sennett comedy movies would have found the scene last week in the Forest City parking lot in Mount Prospect very amusing and typical of Sennett's comedy style.

The production just before 5 p.m. Thursday, however, was the work of a Brink's armored truck, three cars and the Mount Prospect police.

The scene began when one of the Brink's employees called police to inform them that three suspicious vehicles were trailing the truck for some time. Soon several Mount Prospect police squads were dispatched to the Forest City lot, 201 W. Rand Rd., and they surrounded the Brink's truck and the suspicious vehicles.

Most of the slapstick was averted, however, even as the Mount Prospect police were moving in to make their arrests. Each policeman's radio came alive with a dispatch over the state ISPERN emergency police radio network.

According to the ISPERN message, which was quickly verified, the three cars that had been trailing the armored truck were undercover police cars filled with Cook County Sheriff's Police.

Apparently, the sheriff's police were alerted that something involving the truck might be in the wind, but they neither notified Brink's nor the Mount Prospect police. Sheriff's police declined to say why they were trailing the truck.

It would have made a nice chase, if the Mount Prospect police had continued in and the sheriff's police had broken out of the net.

Citizens Utilities rate increase decision expected

The Illinois Commerce Commission is expected to rule shortly on the request of Citizens Utilities Co. to raise sewer and water rates in the New Town section of Mount Prospect and the Waycinden Park subdivision near Des Plaines.

The commission must decide by Aug. 24 whether to permit the Addison firm to increase the minimum monthly water fee from $4.60 to $7 and the standard monthly sewer charge from $3 to $6.

The ICC has three options: Rejecting Citizens Utilities' request for a rate hike

KAREN WINTERSTEIN takes a whack at a ball during a tennis lesson sponsored by the Mount Prospect Park District. She is among 800 persons who have been taking lessons during the first two sessions this summer. Oral arguments may be presented before the ICC board prior to its issuing a ruling.

MEANWHILE, BOTH Mount Prospect and retaining the present fee schedule; granting the entire increase the firm is seeking, or compromising, allowing some increase in rates but not the full amount requested.

CITIZENS' OFFICIALS say they need the increase in rates to cope with the rising cost of labor and materials. Residents, meanwhile, have contested the bid for higher rates, saying it is not warranted and service is poor.

Besides the 3,000 local households served by Citizens, several thousand more in DuPage County receive utility service from the company and would be affected by the ICC verdict.

The ICC's professional staff has been conducting public hearings on the request for an increase for several months.

The hearings will end today with the submission of Citizens' final brief. Oral arguments may be presented before the ICC board prior to its issuing a ruling.

MEANWHILE, BOTH Mount Prospect

and Des Plaines officials are looking into the feasibility of acquiring the Citizens equipment and running the utility service themselves. The Mount Prospect Village Board has authorized a feasibility study of the Citizens equipment within the village.

Des Plaines recently received a study estimating the cost of obtaining the Citizens property in the Waycinden Park subdivision as $2,413,000, and is considering alternatives to outright purchase. The subdivision currently is unincorporated.

School policy manual receives major overhaul

by LUISA GINETTI

Several major changes were incorporated into the revised policy manual, recently adopted by the Mount Prospect Dist. 57 Board of Education.

Among the changes are the addition of an early admission policy, the elimination of sexist language from the text of the manual and the elimination of procedural outlines for executing policy.

The manual, which received its last complete overhaul in 1962, has been almost a year in the making, being reviewed and revised by a board committee headed by board member Edith Freund.

The book is divided into 11 chapters, including sections on goals, the board, the administration, instructional personnel, non-certified personnel, business and noninstructional operation, school organization, instruction, students, school-community relationships and purpose, revision and distribution.

MANY OF THE policies listed under the board, administration and instructional personnel chapters are basically the same as in the past. Under the student chapter, however, several revisions have been included.

The early admission policy, for example, is completely new. It states that children who do not meet the Dec. 1 deadline for reaching the age of 5, but who demonstrate "unusual aptitude or maturity" may be allowed to enter kindergarten. The stipulations for such a child are that he or she reach the age of 5 by March 31 and that the child be given special tests to determine his or her readiness for school.

The policy states further, however, that "The Board of Education encourages parents to seek out enrichment experiences for the mature 4-year-old instead of early school admission."

The chapter also deals with student rights and responsibilities, stating in part "The board of education... believes the students shall have the right to have no assumptions made concerning their eventual life goals."

ANOTHER IMPORTANT policy statement regarding students concerns the presence of police officers on the school grounds. The policy bars policemen and other law enforcement officials from interviewing on school property students who are suspected of non-school-related offenses unless parent or guardian approval has been given.

The new policy manual is smaller than its predecessor because no procedural outlines are included. Supt. Earl Sutter said procedural guidelines for conducting policy are being prepared now.

Revisions in other lesser district handbooks, such as job descriptions, also will be reviewed for updating to make them conform with the new policy guidebook, Sutter said.

Revisions requiring the elimination of generic references to certain jobs presented somewhat of a problem in preparing the text for completion. The entire manual had to be rewritten when the board realized in its preliminary review of the document that such references had not been changed.

The manual was approved last week with the reference corrections.

The policy book, which may be revised and updated by vote of the board, is available for inspection to district employees and the public.

Maryville bid letting by this fall?

Architects designing the new Maryville school say they hope to let bids on the project by late September or early October.

Anthony J. Siros, of Fields, Goldman and Magee, Mount Vernon, Ill., architect in charge of the project, said Friday work is proceeding on architectural drawings for the building. Architects met Thursday with the Illinois Capital Development board to review the project's progress.

Siros said further meetings with the ICDB are planned before the go-ahead for bidding is given by the board, which is overseeing the project.

The ICDB is providing about $1 million for the construction of the school, which will serve students from Maryville Academy in Des Plaines who are wards of the state. The new school will replace River Road School, which does not meet state life safety codes.

ARCHITECTS HAD set a tentative September deadline for letting bids on the project but Siros said postponements in review sessions with the ICDB have made October a more likely target date. Siros said last week's review meeting with the ICDB was routine and board members instructed architects to proceed with work on plans and drawings.

Siros said nothing has impeded architects from maintaining the general timetable they have set for completion of the project. A target date of September, 1975, has been set for occupancy of the new school.

The chief architect admitted, however, that due to construction price increases, planners had to scale down design plans to keep in line with the money that has been appropriated for the project.

NO ADDITIONAL funds for the project are available, Siros said because the money for the work came from a special appropriation voted by the Illinois General Assembly.

Bidding on the project will begin after both the ICDB and the River Trails Dist. 26 Board of Education approve the final architectural plans. The new school will be under the jurisdiction of the Dist. 26 board just as River Road is now.

The new school will be a 30,000 square foot, one-story building which will be basically rectangular in shape with various juts to house instructional modules.

The school will be located on the Maryville Academy grounds in Des Plaines on a five-acre parcel of land at the intersection of Gregory Street and River Road.

Higher taxes, costs mean more off-season uses for track

by KURT BAER

Higher taxes and a growing overhead mean additional off-season uses must be found for Arlington Park Race Track, according to a senior vice president of Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of the track.

"Our race tracks are large facilities and we can't afford to hold on to them if we're only going to use them 80 or 90 days out of the year," said Joseph Joyce, contacted by The Herald Friday in his New York office.

Joyce was at the center of a recent controversy in south suburban Homewood after he proposed a rock concert featuring Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young or Elvis Presley at Washington Park Race Track, also owned by Madison Square Garden.

PLANS FOR the concert, which Joyce guessed could have drawn 100,000 persons, were scratched after the musical groups could not be booked.

While there are no specific plans for a similar music fest at Arlington Park, it is likely something will be proposed in the future, Joyce says.

"It is a reasonable possibility that at some time down the road we'll use Arlington Park for a concert," he said. "We don't like to produce a lot of noise where we have horses stabled, though," he added.

It is Madison Square Garden's policy, according to Joyce, to notify municipalities of plans for special events at their facilities.

"We told the village board in Homewood that there was a possibility that we could get Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. They asked for an estimate of how many people might attend and I said at the outside 100,000, and then the rocket took off," he said.

HUNDREDS OF Homewood residents organized in opposition to the planned concert fearing the hordes of pot-smoking, free love-making teen-agers they associate with rock music. They packed the Homewood village hall last Tuesday to protest the concert only to be told by Joyce that the plan had been dropped.

"The tentative date we had with Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young would not come to fruition and then the Elvis thing fell apart."

"But this doesn't mean we wouldn't try to do something at some other time," Joyce said.

The concert planned for Washington Park was scheduled at a time when the race track is dormant — a condition that will prevail at Arlington Park after this year's racing ends Sept. 7.

In accord with Joyce's comment on the economic necessity of off-season uses for Arlington Park are the plans for a private housing at the track being drawn by the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development firm.

"We're still meeting with Madison Square Garden. I hope we can get back to the village's plat and subdivision committee before too long," Arthur Gingold, Richards Group president, said Friday.

ONE PRELIMINARY plan included several 20-story high-rise apartment buildings on the race track property north of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Gingold has declined to discuss details of the housing plan before it is presented to the plan commission's plat and subdivision committee.

"We're still working with it," he said.

Appropriately enough, the Richards Group of Illinois is a subsidiary of Madison Square Garden Corp.

Local gambling shocks author

Mount Prospect author Richard M. Bueschel, who is writing a book on slot machines, was shocked recently when speaking to a creative writing class at Hershey High School. Almost every student in the group of about 50 indicated that he or she had seen, knew the existence of, or had operated one of the machines.

"I just couldn't believe it," Bueschel said. "There have just got to be a lot of the contraband slots in the basements of homes around here."

The slot machine book is appropriately titled, "Lemons, Cherries . . . and Bell, Fruit, Gum." It probably will be available for Christmas giving.

This book follows one for which Bueschel gained considerable local fame because he wrote it while riding the Chicago & North Western Ry. train. He used the Mount Prospect-to-Chicago-to-Mount Prospect commuter time to turn out his first book — on Communist Chinese air power.

Bueschel still is working with his publisher on the slot machine story but he already is gathering info for his next book, "G.W.G. Ferris and His Wheel."

HEATHER FRANCECK, daughter of Mrs. Charles Franceck, has made the dean's honor roll at the University of Tulsa, where she is a senior in the College of Education.

CONGRATULATIONS to Village Atty. John Zimmerman's secretary, Edith, who recently married and changed her last name to Luke.

THE LOCAL CIVIL Defense volunteers recently were cited for having done a su-

They should be further commended for their work a week ago when the Sunday afternoon storm hit and knocked out many traffic signals in town. The CD people sped to lame corners and did a dandy job handling traffic.

IT'S ALWAYS nice to hear of young people who have found a whole world of exciting and worthwhile activity by being members of youth organizations. Such is the case of Beverly Burton, 17, of 110 S. Busse Rd., a June grad of Forest View High School.

Bev has been an enthusiastic Girl Scout and by being an active participant has found her way into what will probably be a career in social service, working with handicapped children.

Bev worked first with younger girls in the scouting organization. Then she started helping leader Joan Olson with a Girl Scout troop for the handicapped at Kirk Center in Palatine. As a result of that experience and through a sociology class at Forest View, she spent two hours a day during her senior year getting practical experience with the disadvantaged at Clearbrook Center.

Last summer Bev attended a Girl Scout national Big City Sampler where she spent two weeks in Chicago working with the underprivileged. This summer Bev is working in the egg farm at Little City, helping and guiding the youngsters there.

The Girl Scout organization provided Bev with the opportunities — but much credit must be given to Bev too. She's a very special gal who has made the most of each opportunity.

cheer up when he visited the pediatrics wing of Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

'Better than medicine'

Jack Thum The Clown loves children, and the feeling happens to be mutual

by FRAN SLIMMER

Jack Thum's been clowning around the state for the past 15 years, and vows to do it the rest of his life.

He dons his colorful baggy suit, big red nose, curly wig and big flipper-like shoes seven days a week, to entertain at parties, promotions and picnics. He also makes volunteer visits to children in hospitals and orphanages twice a week, including one to the Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

"Once I get that costume on, time doesn't matter," Thum said. He may be hired for three hours, he said, but he'll stay around as long as he gets children to laugh.

"We all need a little laughter," he said. "There's so much grief in the world."

THUM LOVES children, and while he has none of his own, he has raised 16 foster children. "I haven't had a Christmas without a child with me," Thum said.

"A child is a child to me," he said, whether the child's healthy, sick or handicapped. "As long as he has a smile and feels wanted, he's the same to me. They're all God's children — and I'm the biggest one."

Thum remembers when he was a child who spent two years in a hospital, paralyzed with rheumatic fever. He recalls how he felt when someone came in to cheer him up. Now he visits children confined in hospitals and orphanages. "I, Jack Thum The Clown, will go to them and make them happy."

Thum said he was "gifted" with the talent to be a clown. He had been a salesman and was always joking around before he became Jack Thum The Clown.

"I don't think there's another clown in the business who goes by his real name," he said.

HE USES A big rubber thumb as a prop in his act. "I ask the kids what they would call me if I didn't have my thumb," he said. "They always say 'Fingers.'"

Thum likes to have children assist him in his act, which includes a few simple magic tricks.

Thum invited a little boy with an ear-to-ear grin help him make "magic popcorn" Thursday at Alexian Brothers. Thum sprinkled "magic corn" and "magic salt" in a "magic pan," and instructed his assistant to hit the pan with a magic wand.

"If you keep hitting like that you're going to make a chicken fly out," he warned his rather enthusiastic helper.

Thum visits hospitals with cartons full of surprises — get-well cards, bubble gum, tootsie pops and magazines, props for magic tricks and handcuffs to hang on to reporters with. Children sometimes react rather shyly to him, he said, but he likes to make them smile and forget their ills.

ONE HOSPITAL, St. James in Chicago Heights, said Thum is "better than medicine," when it comes to taking the pain away from a sick child. "They call me 'TLC' — tender loving care," he said. Other hospitals have claimed him as "their clown," he said.

Thum does radio and television spots, has performed at McCormick Place and recently gave the key to the City of Harvey to Gov. Daniel Walker. Soon he'll be visiting Dixon State Hospital, which he does several times a year. Also, Illinois Central Hospital wants to send him to an orphanage in Poland, he said.

"I'm looking for my own TV show," he said.

It takes Thum two hours to put on his clown face — white skin with a big red smile, bulbous red nose, blue-painted and glittered designs on his face and blue sideburns. "Can you guess how many hours a day I spend in this makeup?" he said. Sometimes it's most of the day. He always drives, in costume, to his performances.

"My costume's not frightening," he said. "I'm a happy clown with a happy face." He likes to make children smile, he said.

"It's the most beautiful thing in the world to give children something to be happy about," Thum said. "I wouldn't give this up for a million dollars — and believe me, I've had offers."

Double trouble accidents...

Patrolman Donald Gavel of the Mount Prospect police would not have been blamed if he thought he was seeing double last week.

Gavel investigated two automobile accidents at the same location some 136 minutes apart Thursday and, sure enough, one of the drivers was the same in both accidents.

The first accident occurred at 9:29 a.m. on Main Street, 200 feet north of Northwest Highway. David A. Bobrowski, 18, of Chicago, told Gavel he was accidentally left the brake for a few seconds. Those seconds were time enough for Bobrowski's pickup truck to strike the rear of a car driven by George K. Malayil, 32, of 607 N. Eastwood Ave., Mount Prospect, police said.

Neither driver was hurt, but Malayil's vehicle received about $600 worth of damage. The pickup truck's damage was about $25, police said.

BOBROWSKI WAS charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident and failure to have his driver's license with him. He will appear on those charges Aug. 21 in the Mount Prospect branch of Circuit Court.

Then, at 11:45 a.m., it was Bobrowski again involved in an accident at that same location. Gavel said that Bobrowski, apparently having had his coffee, was backing out of a driveway when his truck struck a car driven by Douglas R. Fremont, 27, of 900 Mark Ln., Wheeling.

Again there were no injuries, but the pickup truck escaped damage and damage to the Fremont vehicle was about $250.

No charges were filed in the second accident. Police said that in both cases the cars struck by Bobrowski were stopped for traffic lights.

Varsity cheerleaders win 5th-place trophy

Prospect High School's varsity cheerleading squad took a fifth-place trophy at the United States Cheerleading Assn. camp this month.

The squad also took third, fourth and sixth-place ribbons during competition July 12-15. Prospect's junior varsity squad took a second-place ribbon.

The varsity squad is now eligible for grand national competition in Lansing, Mich., Aug. 17.

Higher taxes, costs mean more off-season uses for track

by KURT BAER

Higher taxes and a growing overhead mean additional off-season uses must be found for Arlington Park Race Track, according to a senior vice president of Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of the track.

"Our race tracks are large facilities and we can't afford to hold on to them if we're only going to use them 80 or 90 days out of the year," said Joseph Joyce, contacted by The Herald Friday in his New York office.

Joyce was at the center of a recent controversy in south suburban Homewood after he proposed a rock concert featuring Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young or Elvis Presley at Washington Park Race Track, also owned by Madison Square Garden.

PLANS FOIT the concert, which Joyce guessed could have drawn 100,000 persons, were scratched after the musical groups could not be booked.

While there are no specific plans for a similar music fest at Arlington Park, it is likely something will be proposed in the future, Joyce says.

"It is a reasonable possibility that at some time down the road we'll use Arlington Park for a concert," he said. "We don't like to produce a lot of noise where we have horses stabled, though," he added.

It is Madison Square Garden's policy, according to Joyce, to notify municipalities of plans for special events at their facilities.

"We told the village board in Homewood that there was a possibility that we could get Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. They asked for an estimate of how many people might attend and I said at the outside 100,000, and then the rocket took off," he said.

HUNDREDS OF Homewood residents organized in opposition to the planned concert fearing the hordes of pot-smoking, free love-making teen-agers they associate with rock music. They packed the Homewood village hall last Tuesday to protest the concert only to be told by Joyce that the plan had been dropped.

"The tentative date we had with Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young would not come to fruition and then the Elvis thing fell apart."

"But this doesn't mean we wouldn't try to do something at some other time," Joyce said.

The concert planned for Washington Park was scheduled at a time when the race track is dormant — a condition that will prevail at Arlington Park after this year's racing ends Sept. 7.

In accord with Joyce's comment on the economic necessity of off-season uses for Arlington Park are the plans for a private housing at the track being drawn by the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development firm.

"We're still meeting with Madison Square Garden. I hope we can get back to the village's plat and subdivision committee before too long," Arthur Gingold, Richards Group president, said Friday.

ONE PRELIMINARY plan included several 20-story high-rise apartment buildings on the race track property north of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Gingold has declined to discuss details of the housing plan before it is presented to the plan commission's plat and subdivision committee.

"We're still working with it," he said.

Appropriately enough, the Richards Group of Illinois is a subsidiary of Madison Square Garden Corp.

Burglars, state agents exchange gunfire here

Gunfire was exchanged Friday afternoon in Arlington Heights between agents of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation and four men who had burglarized a house.

The four men were apparently still at large Sunday.

The incident occurred at 10:47 p.m. Friday when six agents from the FBI organized crime division began searching the area around Wilshire and Miner Street for the four men.

The four, believed to be professional burglars, escaped on foot from the area after they broke into the home of 42-year-old William G. Baron, 400 N. Windsor.

BUREAU OFFICIALS Sunday declined to discuss details of the incident or to confirm if the four have been found. A spokesman for the bureau said a news briefing on the matter would be released today.

However, Arlington Heights police said Sunday that the four, whose identity the FBI asked not be revealed, are still at large.

The chase began after the six agents began combing the area near Wilshire and Miner for the four men.

The four men had been followed by the agents through Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights apparently in anticipation of a residential burglary attempt, police said. The four had been riding in two Lincoln Continental automobiles with Illinois license plates, but the cars were impounded by the bureau after they were abandoned in the pursuit.

THE FOUR apparently broke into the Baron home just before the chase. Baron and his wife were away on vacation in Wisconsin. Two daughters, 13-year-old Leslie and 16-year-old Diane were also away at the time of the break-in. They found the house ransacked when they returned. They told police they found items stacked near the door of the house when they entered.

Police had no report on what, if any items may have been taken.

The four men fled the scene on foot, eluding Arlington Heights police and the FBI agents. An area-wide police alert for the four was then issued.

No one was reported injured in the shooting incident during the chase.

IF GRASS CLIPPING DISPOSAL is a hassle for the average homeowner, the problem is tenfold for the lawn maintenance man. But George C. Fischer, who has a lawn maintenance company in Arlington Heights, has a solution much to the dismay of some Palatine residents. Fischer recycles grass clippings on a lot on Carter Street in unincorporated Palatine Township to form organic mulch. The ecological advantages of the recycling are disputed by some who complain it is an eyesore, stinks and breeds mosquitoes and rodents. A representative of the Environmental Protection Agency investigated the lot but found no health hazard or violation of the EPA since the lot is used only for temporary storage.

Closed session today on Walsh's replacement

The Arlington Heights Village Board will meet again in executive session tonight to discuss a replacement for outgoing Village Pres. Jack Walsh.

Walsh announced last Monday that he will resign as soon as his successor is chosen, or on July 26 at the latest when he will leave Arlington Heights for a new home in Lake Geneva, Wis., where he recently opened the Lakeland Firestone store.

It had been feared that summer vacations would preclude the immediate appointment of a village president, and that the board of trustees would have to nominate a chairman pro tempore. However tonight's session could settle the question.

Walsh's appointed replacement will serve until the village election next April.

Veteran Trustee Frank Palmatier is considered a likely candidate for the village presidency. He tried unsuccessfully for the Caucus Party's nomination for the office in 1972.

'Meals on Wheels' brings hot food to elderly

by JOE SWICKARD

"This is just grand," said Mrs. Clara Donahue as she put her veal parmesan dinner on her counter.

Mrs. Donahue is one of seven Arlington Heights residents who is taking part in the "meals on wheels" program. The program, which began July 15, brings a hot, balanced meal week days to older residents who are housebound or have difficulty cooking for themselves.

The venture, still in the preliminary stage, is a joint effort with Northwest Community Hospital, the village health department, and volunteer drivers.

THE PROGRAM is designed to be self-supporting, said Frank Charlton, village health director. Each meal costs the recipient $1.63, which defrays the hospital's cost of preparing it, he said.

The health department acts as the clearing house for the program and maintains the waiting lists.

The village also is involved in the meal service through the senior citizens' commission. Earlier this year, 23,000 questionnaires were sent out by the commission and more than 150 responded that they would be interested in such a hot lunch project. The meal question was one of 36 questions covering the problems of older citizens.

"We contacted those who answered 'yes' to the question, and most said they were interested but they didn't think that they needed it at this time," Charlton said.

From those who felt they did need the program, seven were selected and five have been placed on a waiting list.

THE MEALS ARE delivered by volunteers. Starting today members of the American Assn. of Retired Persons will be handling the route. Last Friday, Ralph Bemis, president of the Arlington Heights chapter, went with Charlton to familiarize himself with the operation.

The first stop is the hospital kitchen, where dietary workers, under the direction of Ruth Stubb, prepare each meal.

Veal parmesan was the main course Friday, with noodles and Italian cut green beans, a salad and cherry strudel for dessert. The meals are nutritionally balanced and the menu is varied daily.

Once wrapped in foil, they are carried in a specially-designed rack with an insulated cover. Meals stay hot up to an hour-and-a-half in the carrier.

THE FIRST STOP is to the William Tait's. In their 80s, they are the only couple on the route.

Tait answers the bell. Mrs. Tait is confined to a wheelchair. After greetings, Charlton asked about the quality of the food.

"The beans were cold last time. It was just like they were straight out of the can," Tait said. Charlton said the situation would not happen again.

After the minor complaint, Tait talks about his son-in-law, who had just signed with a German opera company.

Charlton said, like most housebound persons, those on the route often do not get the opportunity to visit and chat.

Joe Miles is next on the list. He is 66 and in poor health. His condition is such that it would be difficult, if not impossible, for him to do his own shopping.

He pronounced the food and service "swell," and like the Tait's, takes a minute to visit.

Mrs. Clara Donahue is a native of Pekin, Ill., and said a successful meals on wheels has been going there for 12 years.

Mrs. Donahue has a respiratory condition that makes it difficult for her to get out. She wondered aloud whether she should be classified as housebound. She could make do on those days she couldn't do her marketing, she said.

CHARLTON POINTED out the prime objective was to make sure the people have nutritionally balanced meals. The "making do" meals, such as milk and bread are often not enough to maintain good health, he said.

Charlton said later one aspect of the program is to free families and neighbors somewhat. He emphasized, though, that the meals are not delivered on weekends.

This, he said, causes the families to maintain ties. He said it is "family incentive."

The last woman on the route is being dropped from the service. Charlton said she is physically active and there is a shopping center with a grocery store within 100 yards of her door.

Bemis said the association will handle the deliveries for a month and then he hoped church groups could become involved. This way, he said, many people would have the chance to participate in the service, without placing the burden on just one or two organizations.

"It's the volunteers who make this go. Without them, we wouldn't have a thing," Bemis said.

Debate ends, schools hire Mrs. Reid

The School Dist. 21 Board of Education has agreed 5 to 0 to give Supt. Kenneth Gill the go-ahead to hire former board colleague Mary Joan Reid for a full-time paid position with the district.

The board met in a short executive session following a special meeting last Friday night. Before the session several board members said they had their doubts about the move because, although it is legal, many residents felt there was a "gray area" of unanswered questions about Mrs. Reid's qualifications.

Gill said he showed the board members the applications of all those who applied for the job and said that the board agreed Mrs. Reid was best suited for the full-time position.

THE NINE-YEAR school board veteran, who resigned two weeks ago, did not appear at Friday's special meeting. She now will be hired at a salary of $9,000 per year to coordinate the district's volunteer program and public relations work.

Board Pres. Jack Lane told The Herald earlier Friday that he is planning to recommend that the board pursue a policy that eliminates such situations in the future. Lane said the policy would not allow any active school board member to seek a job in the district until his or her term expired, or they resigned before even applying. It is not known when the board will act on such a policy.

The board now has until Aug. 24 to appoint someone to take Mrs. Reid's place. Anyone interested in sitting on the Dist. 21 board should submit a letter to Lane no later than Thursday. Letters should be sent to the Administration Building, 999 W. Dundee Rd. Wheeling.

IN OTHER ACTION Friday night the board voted 3 to 2 to retain its own attorneys rather than specialists in the Dist. 21 controversy with Tempron, Inc. The company was responsible for installing a security system throughout the district's 17 schools. School officials say, however, Tempron failed to comply with its contract, since the system is not functioning properly.

Board members Kenneth Rodeck and Jeremiah Crise said they wanted attorneys who specialize in such cases to handle the matter. Their counterparts Lillian Stiller, Ed Smith and Lane, however, disagreed and voted to retain the district's attorneys.

Gill said the district will try to work out an agreement with Insurance Co. of America, bonding company for Tempron, in an effort to settle the matter. Gill said no further action will take place until officials have received an answer from INA.

Police find drugs, booze in sweep of Pioneer Park

More than 150 youths were cleared from Pioneer Park late Friday when Arlington Heights police ordered the park closed after finding evidence of narcotics and liquor.

The action was ordered at approximately 10:30 p.m. after officers patrolling the park found beer cans and bottles and varying quantities of drugs in the interior lot of the park where some 150 to 175 youths were congregated.

The park was closed for the remainder of the night by police order. Two park district employees present at the time concurred with the closing order, although one told police he has allowed youths to drink in the park after 9 p.m. as long as no vandalism takes place.

According to police, drugs found in the park included tablets of valium, tablets marked ASIN, tablets possibly containing amphetamines and a small quantity of marijuana.

No arrests were reported. Police said more than half the youths in the park at the time were from Rolling Meadows.

Vandalism, looting and youth problems have plagued the park at 500 S. Fernandez. The park has been closed on other occasions because of rowdy youths and incidents.

A report on Friday's incident was to be sent to Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson and Arlington Heights Park District officials.

In K & B lawsuit

Homeowners want settlement

by NANCY COWGER

Most homeowners in Barrington Square believe Hoffman Estates should opt for an out-of-court settlement in the lawsuits pending between the village and the company, Kaufman and Broad Inc., that built their homes.

The homeowners feel little or no partialism toward the $100,000 the village could gain if settlement is approved on terms thus far made public. As one resident said, "It wasn't just Barrington Square that got ripped off. The whole city got ripped off."

The suits stem from events that happened nearly six years ago, when K&B bribed six village officials for speedy, no-questions-asked zoning for the Barrington Square development. The ex-officials were convicted last winter in the bribery scheme, and this June village board members voted to withhold building permits for late phases in the development, and restudy zoning on undeveloped land with an eye to zoning changes.

K&B FILED SUIT against the village, seeking immediate issuance of the permits and approval of final plans for the still undeveloped land with no zoning adjustments. In response, the village authorized, but has not yet filed, a suit against K&B to recover ill-gotten profits the company derived as a result of the bribes.

Since then, settlement negotiations have been under way. Although attorneys have refused to outline progress in their talks, some trustees broke the secrecy and disclosed the village request of $100,000 in cash, 12.5 acres of park land at Barrington Square and $250,000 of improvements to Poplar Creek, which traverses the K&B property.

The alternative to settlement is a court battle to establish a new legal maxim — persons who pay or receive bribes can face more than criminal punishment. If caught, they can face civil fines so steep as to make the risk connected with bribery one of financial ruin.

Since that maxim is not law now, there is no assurance the village would win its suit. The $15,000 allocated to pay legal costs could be thrown away, or it could pay a dividend in honest government through fear of the consequences.

Most Barrington Square residents interviewed think the village would be smart to take the settlement, because they "don't believe they would get any more out of it" by following through on the suit. Mrs. Chester Dunn believes the homeowners association, which has filed a suit of its own, should press its complaint, and not accept a settlement if one is offered.

ALTHOUGH THE BRIBES, and federal indictments and convictions that revealed them, grew out of construction of Barrington Square, the residents do not feel possessive about any compensation the village may derive, either from settlement or suit. Raymond Singer, strongly critical of the builder, believes the bribery hurt many more people than the purchasers at Barrington Square, who may have paid the bribe cost in their home prices.

But Singer does not believe the lawsuits and potential settlement will make K&B suffer enough for what the company did.

"I don't think we should cripple them. But we should break their arms a couple of times," he said.

Singer expressed no surprise that bribes changed hands. "It's very common. You've got it everywhere now," he said. For the village to fight in court for a precedent setting ruling, accepting no less than the new legal principle that could result, would be a realistic goal, he said.

Mrs. James Gintzler also would push for a court battle, if the village asked her advice. "After dealing with K&B, I think it (the village) should get all it can. It should go to court," she said. Mrs. Gintzler called K&B "highway robbers," and said she has "no use for people who are not honest." She hates the thought "I paid more for my house than it is worth because someone got paid off and I paid the pay off," she said.

K&B SHOULD BE trimmed in court as a warning, believes Mrs. Gintzler, who views the firm's conduct as a case of "a bit outfit that felt it could throw its weight around — money talked for them."

Merchants plan Sidewalk Days sale, carnival

Sidewalk Days, the traditional summer sale in downtown Arlington Heights, will be held Thursday through Saturday.

Sponsored by the Downtown Arlington Heights Merchants Assn., Sidewalk Days will be run in connection with a downtown carnival, a children's dog show and nightly entertainment.

The carnival will open Wednesday night in the downtown commuter lots. Rides include the Skydiver, Scooter, Para Trooper, Hurricane, Tilt-a-Whirl, Spider, Merry-go-round, Moon Walk, Ferris Wheel and five kiddie rides.

A children's dog show will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at the cultural center site, 400 N. Dunton Ave. Trophies will be awarded for small dog, large dog, best tricks, best costume and best of show, and all entries will receive a blue ribbon.

Kids should register their dogs at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at the cultural center site. A dixieland music festival will be staged at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, and the Delores Eller dance school will present a dance review at 7 p.m. Friday.

Bleacher seating for both shows will be provided at 114 W. Campbell St., one-half block west of Vail Avenue.

RANDY DUENN of Arlington Heights was chosen the grand prize winner of a recent American Cancer Society bike-a-thon and was awarded a juke box. Randy has donated the prize to St. John United Church of Christ in Arlington Heights as a gift from the senior high school class.

IT'S NOT ALWAYS EASY to bring a smile to a sick child's face, but Jack Thum The Clown tries, with jokes, candy, magazines and a big red smile. Kim Haase of Schaumburg is one child Jack tried to cheer up when he visited the pediatrics wing of Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

'Better than medicine'

Jack Thum The Clown loves children, and the feeling happens to be mutual

by FRAN SLIMMER

Jack Thum's been clowning around the state for the past 15 years, and vows to do it the rest of his life.

He dons his colorful baggy suit, big red nose, curly wig and big flipper-like shoes seven days a week, to entertain at parties, promotions and picnics. He also makes volunteer visits to children in hospitals and orphanages twice a week, including one to the Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village last week.

"Once I got that costume on, time doesn't matter," Thum said. He may be hired for three hours, he said, but he'll stay around as long as he gets children to laugh.

"We all need a little laughter," he said. "There's so much grief in the world."

THUM LOVES children, and while he has none of his own, he has raised 16 foster children. "I haven't had a Christmas without a child with me," Thum said.

"A child is a child to me," he said, whether the child's healthy, sick or handicapped. "As long as he has a smile and feels wanted, he's the same to me. They're all God's children — and I'm the biggest one."

Thum remembers when he was a child who spent two years in a hospital, paralyzed with rheumatic fever. He recalls how he felt when someone came in to cheer him up. Now he visits children confined in hospitals and orphanages. "I, Jack Thum The Clown, will go to them and make them happy."

Thum said he was "gifted" with the talent to be a clown. He had been a salesman and was always joking around before he became Jack Thum The Clown.

"I don't think there's another clown in the business who goes by his real name," he said.

HE USES A big rubber thumb as a prop in his act. "I ask the kids what they would call me if I didn't have my thumb," he said. "They always say 'Fingers.'"

Thum likes to have children assist him in his act, which includes a few simple magic tricks.

Thum invited a little boy with an ear-to-ear grin help him make "magic popcorn" Thursday at Alexian Brothers. Thum sprinkled "magic corn" and "magic salt" in a "magic pan," and instructed his assistant to hit the pan with a magic wand.

"If you keep hitting like that you're going to make a chicken fly out," he warned his rather enthusiastic helper.

Thum visits hospitals with cartons full of surprises — get-well cards, bubble gum, tootsie pops and magazines, props for magic tricks and handcuffs to hang on to reporters with. Children sometimes react rather shyly to him, he said, but he likes to make them smile and forget their ills.

ONE HOSPITAL, St. James in Chicago Heights, said Thum is "better than medicine." When it comes to taking the pain away from a sick child, "They call me 'TLC' — tender loving care," he said. Other hospitals have claimed him as "their clown," he said.

Thum does radio and television spots, has performed at McCormick Place and recently gave the key to the City of Harvey to Gov. Daniel Walker. Soon he'll be visiting Dixon State Hospital, which he does several times a year. Also, Illinois Central Hospital wants to send him to an orphanage in Poland, he said.

"I'm looking for my own TV show," he said.

It takes Thum two hours to put on his clown face — white skin with a big red smile, bulbous red nose, blue-painted and glittered designs on his face and blue sideburns. "Can you guess how many hours a day I spend in this makeup?" he said. Sometimes it's most of the day. He always drives, in costume, to his performances.

"My costume's not frightening," he said. "I'm a happy clown with a happy face." He likes to make children smile, he said.

"It's the most beautiful thing in the world to give children something to be happy about," Thum said. "I wouldn't give this up for a million dollars — and believe me, I've had offers."

Centner findings may be released soon

The Palatine Police and Fire Commission may make its findings on eight charges against Robert Centner, former police chief, available to the Palatine village president Tuesday.

Paul Jung, commission chairman, said the commission has requested that additional corrections in the findings be made before it is made public.

Commission attorney, William Littlejohn, is making the corrections and will not be finished until Tuesday, Jung said.

Jung will deliver seven copies of the findings to Palatine Village Pres. Wendell Jones when they are completed. Jung said he would leave to Jones the decision when to distribute the findings to the village board members, public and press.

Book discussion Thursday

Philip Roth's "My Life as a Man" will be the topic of a book discussion Thursday in the conference room of the Arlington Heights Memorial Library, 500 N. Dunton.

The discussion begins at 7:30 p.m. All interested persons are invited to attend.

Centner was forced to resign by the village board June 25, 1973. The board said Centner lacked effective administration abilities, conducted poor force control programs and did not enforce overweight truck restrictions. A five-month series of hearings were held on the charges against Centner to determine the validity of the charges.

Centner has served as a lieutenant in the Palatine Police Dept. since his resignation. Jerry Bratcher has been the Palatine police chief since January.

Museum in new book

The Arlington Heights Historical Museum is described in a new book entitled "Museums of Illinois," published by Weekends Inc. of Salem, Ill.

The village's museum, 500 N. Vail Ave., is one of more than 100 museums described in the paperback guidebook.
